

Peace Outlook Not 'Smooth' In Mideast

TEL AVIV (AP) — Prime Minister Menahem Begin's declared success in summitry with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat must be translated into action if Israel and Egypt are to make steady progress toward peace.

The next stage calls for ministerial-level talks on military and political disagreements, and the road ahead looks pretty rocky at the moment.

Gen. Avraham Tamir, Israel's military representative at the recessed Cairo negotiations admits, "We must have many compromises. To tell you everything will be smooth, no, it will not be so."

In the upcoming talks, details of Israel's willingness to withdraw from most of Sinai will be discussed by Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman and Egyptian War Minister Abdel Ghani el Gamasy in Cairo.

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and his Egyptian counterpart, Mohammed Kamel, will have a more difficult task in their political talks, centering on the Palestinian Arab problem.

Sadat described this question as the "core and crux" of the Mideast dispute and reported in the "agreed statement" at the end of the Ismailia summit Monday only that "Egypt and Israel discussed differences."

The Israeli proposal for Palestinian

Arab self-rule plainly was unacceptable to Sadat even though Begin, back home in Israel, said of the idea, "it is a great event in the history of this country and of the Palestinian Arabs."

At the news conference before leaving Ismailia, Begin hinted that Palestinian Arabs may join the political negotiations beginning in about three weeks. In addition, Sadat said he saw a role for the United States and the United Nations in the Jerusalem talks.

Who would represent the Palestinians? This is one of the first questions the foreign ministers will have to handle. Holding their talks in the Israeli capital may indicate some success for Israel's proposal that the Palestinians be represented by people now living under Israeli occupation in the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

If Egypt accepts this idea, it would be a big step away from the general Arab position that the occupied Palestinians don't have enough political freedom to negotiate for themselves.

The complexity of this and other problems leads to a lot of speculation about a separate pact between Israel and Egypt, whose dispute over sandy Sinai is more easily solved than the emotional Palestinian question.

Letters Swamp Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Angry state tax officials are writing President Carter to protest a trade treaty with Great Britain that could deprive states of hundreds of millions of tax dollars from multinational corporations.

At issue is a treaty provision that would prohibit state auditors from considering the costs and profits of foreign subsidiaries in determining a company's taxes.

W.C. Strickland, Georgia state revenue commissioner, said this would allow multinationals to avoid state income tax payments by shifting profits to overseas affiliates.

The treaty, negotiated by the Treasury Department and now pending in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, would apply to British-based multinationals operating in this country. But state officials say that if British firms are granted the tax break, it soon will apply to all multinationals.

Most states now use some form of the so-called "unitary business doctrine," which considers all operations.

But Treasury Department officials say the unitary doctrine is unfair to corporations because most taxing jurisdictions around the world use the "arms length" approach, in which a company reports only the income and costs that the firm considers relevant to its local operations.

State officials argue that many corporations habitually under-report their tax liabilities under the arms-length system.

The unitary method has increased corporate tax liabilities wherever it has been used, indicating significant disagreement between tax officials and corporate officers as to what is taxable at a state level. State officials concede that the current unitary method needs refinement.

But "any valid disagreement between the states and the multinationals must be resolved with compromise from both sides, not a total federal cave-in to the desires of the multinationals," Strickland argued in a letter to Carter signed by officials from 12 states.

The state officials are not the only ones lobbying on the issue. The multinationals are working for approval of the treaty and have mounted a campaign in California to repeal the unitary approach there.

In his letter, Strickland told the president that, "There is a movement afoot in your administration which will effectively tie the states' hands in coping with taxation of multinational corporations."

"This proposal is inconsistent with your administration's stated goals for tax reform, especially when major beneficiaries would be multinational oil companies."

California, Oregon and Alaska rely heavily on the unitary approach, and the Western Governors Conference says the treaty would cost these three states an estimated $150 million a year.

Strickland's letter carried signatures from tax or revenue officers from Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Maryland, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah and Vermont.

Additional letters to Carter were sent by officials from California, Minnesota, Washington and West Virginia, and from the governors of New Hampshire and South Dakota.

U.S. Feels Russian Missile Could Hit Here

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of uncertainty, U.S. officials now believe that Russia has started deploying a new mobile land-based missile with potential to hit the United States.

In its present form, the Soviet SS-20 missile's estimated 3,000-mile range limits it to targets in Western Europe, China and the Middle East.

But U.S. specialists say its range can be extended easily to 5,500 nautical miles by adding a third rocket stage to the present two stages.

That would make it similar to the SS-16 intercontinental ballistic missile and put the United States within its range.

U.S. military officials are concerned the conversion could tip the nuclear balance against the United States quickly in a time of diplomatic crisis, especially since mobile missile bases would be hard to find and knock out.

Pentagon officials warned earlier about the potential for conversion of the SS-20, but noted then that the missile had not been deployed.

The months of uncertainty and conflicting reports on deployment apparently stemmed from difficulty in locating and identifying the SS-20's movable launch equipment at combat-ready positions inside the Soviet Union.

However, U.S. military intelligence analysts now say the SS-20 is deployed in eastern Russia.

That suggests the first combat-ready SS-20s, which can carry three nuclear warheads each, are aimed at targets in China, with which Russia has been feuding for years.

Intelligence analysts also believe preparations are under way to deploy mobile missiles in western and central Russia. From western Russia, SS-20s could blanket Western Europe. From central Russia, the missiles could strike targets in the Middle East.

With their 3,000-mile range, the SS-20s are unlikely to be subject to limitations on strategic nuclear weapons now being negotiated by Soviet and U.S. diplomats.

That is because, although they could be converted to long range missiles, SS-20s as now deployed do not have long enough range to strike the United States from Russian soil.

Also, the Russians have shown no interest in President Carter's bid for a mutual ban on mobile strategic missiles.

The United States is developing a possible huge new intercontinental range missile which could be deployed in underground movable launch pads, but the Carter administration has delayed full-scale development work.

Therapy Showing Success With Housewife In Coma

TOKYO (AP) — Harriet Rosenberg, a 34-year-old mother of two from East Monroe, N.Y., who has been in a coma for almost a year, shows "small, first signs" she might regain consciousness through a new blood circulating therapy started last week, her husband said today.

"Doctors told me there have been small improvements. First, her finger muscles softened. Now you can bend her fingers which we couldn't do before," Ted Rosenberg, 38, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

Doctors also told him his wife now blinks her left and right eyelids to an equal degree and that she can swallow saliva, although unconsciously, Rosenberg said. She could do neither before the therapy, he added.

"Doctors said the blood-circulating therapy is a step-by-step procedure, especially to a patient of her age. And I don't expect an overnight miracle. But let me say doctors and I are cautiously optimistic," Rosenberg said.

Mrs. Rosenberg underwent the first of a series of "autogenous blood pumping therapy" sessions at the Iwate Medical College in northern Japan on Dec. 22. The treatment calls for pumping 20 cubic centimeters of patient's blood into an aspirator — a partial vacuum chamber — where a chemical is added and the blood then pumped back into the artery.

The 20-cc pumping process is repeated 30 to 40 times in a single treatment and repeated after two-week intervals. The chemical is added to dilate the constricted arteries suffered by persons in a coma. The resulting dilation of the arteries helps the patient to receive an adequate flow of blood throughout the body, including the brain.

The treatment has been effective more than 50 percent of the time, including the case of an 11-year-old girl, Sachiko Iwade, who regained consciousness after a three-year coma and now is back in school, Dr. Haruyuki Kanaya of the college reported earlier.

Mrs. Rosenberg suffered brain damage in an automobile collision in January while she was taking her 5-year-old son, Barry, to nursery school. She has been in a coma ever since, although she started to blink her eyelids in March, Rosenberg said.

After about one month of observation, the second series of treatment for Mrs. Rosenberg will start on Jan. 26.

Strangler Case Hampered

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Investigators of the Hillside Strangler case have been hampered by dead-end clues, a lack of tips, and false confessions. But perhaps most frustrating of all has been dissension among law enforcement agencies drawn together by the dumping of murdered females across the northern suburbs.

The latest disagreement centers on whether one of two young women found slain over the weekend is the strangler's latest victim. But disputes in the case began soon after it was noted in mid-November that the bodies of young girls and women were beginning to turn up with unusual frequency in the Los Angeles area.

Investigators from the agencies then involved — the sheriff's office and Los Angeles and Glendale police — met but could not agree on which victims were connected. They continued to handle the cases separately, although a tentative liaison was set up.

On Nov. 25, Sheriff's Lt. Phil Bollington dropped two names from a list of 11 possible victims of the strangler. He said no definite connection could be established between the nine other slayings and the deaths of 7-year-old Margaret Elizabeth Madrid, found Nov. 6 in the city of Industry, and 19-year-old Theresa Berry of Pomona, found Nov. 4 in Walnut.

But Los Angeles police Cmdr. William Booth declined the same day to rule out any of the 11 victims as targets of the same killer or to pinpoint any as connected.

"Because of the dissimilarities in the case, the ages and backgrounds, there is a strong possibility that a number of the cases are not connected in any way," he said.

However, when the strangler task force was formed shortly thereafter and put out its official list, Miss Berry and the Madrid girl were ruled out. At least two more victims have turned up since.

Differences were also apparent in other areas.

Election Commission Suit Called 'Harassment Tactic'

WASHINGTON — National Right to Work Committee President Reed Larson said today the Federal Election Commission (FEC) suit alleging the Committee has violated federal election laws is a "harassment tactic" intended to cripple the Committee's political arm, and deprive the Committee's 1.4 million members of their constitutional rights to contribute to political causes in which they believe.

Larson said the suit was a form of retaliation against the Committee for its two successful court actions forcing the FEC to act on its complaints that the National Election Association union and the AFL-CIO illegally used compulsory union dues and fees to support political candidates.

He said the suit shows a double standard by the FEC in dealing with the National Right to Work Committee and organized labor.

In January, 1976, in accordance with FEC regulations, the Committee asked the Commission for an advisory opinion on the operations of its political arm, Employee Rights Campaign Committee (ERCC), and its communications with its members.

Finally, frustrated by more than a year and a half of FEC in federal court, charging the biased agency failed to respond in a reasonable time as required by law. Even so, the FEC still hasn't rendered the advisory opinion, or acted on the question of member communications.

"The FEC, in this unnecessary suit, by continuing to conceal its definition of member, is preventing us from communicating with our political action committee members," Larson said. "We're denied the right to take a part in the political process because of the FEC's intransigence."

"In contrast, the FEC acted quickly in bending the rules for the AFL-CIO. When the FEC began writing its own rules and regulations, one of the first was to expressly allow the AFL-CIO to solicit political donations from employees belonging to various international unions, even though those employees are not members of the AFL-CIO according to its own charter."

"That shows the political muscle the AFL-CIO has with the FEC."

Larson also pointed out other evidence from the suit of FEC harassment.

In the suit it was forced to file against the AFL-CIO last week, the FEC asked only for a fine of $10,000 against the federation and its political arm COPE, for illegally transferring in excess of $392,000 from its general fund treasury to COPE for campaign expenditures.

However, against the Right of Work Committee and its political action arm, the vindictive FEC is seeking fines of $100,000, plus 200 percent of $76,474.87 allegedly used for campaign expenditures, and return of the funds.

"This outrageous suit against the Right to Work Committee provides a glimpse of what's to come to any citizen or group who dares to oppose compulsory unionism," Larson said. "This is a harassment tactic intended to help Big Labor officials cripple and eventually wipe out the Right to Work in America."

"It is not just a coincidence the suit comes a few days after the Committee struck the AFL-CIO with a suit for using compulsory dues and fees for politics."

Larson pointed to the appointment of Thomas E. Harris as chairman of the FEC as indicative of the Commission's pro-Big Labor bias. Harris was a chief aide and lobbyist to Meany and other union officials for 30 years, and fought Right to Work laws across the country. Two other proposed Carter nominees to the Commission also have strong organized labor support—Sam Zagoria, an apologist for compulsory unionism, and John W. McGarry, a congression aide with strong Big Labor ties.

"This suit has a chilling affect on several constitutional issues," Larson said. "Our right to petition for due process, our right to participate in the political process, our right to communicate with our supporters, our freedom of association, and our freedom of speech."

Strangler . . .

Los Angeles police said they would not comment on the sketch and have not released any drawings of their own.

Tension between the Glendale and Los Angeles departments rose sharply when Glendale Police Chief Duane Baker made an offhand remark at a civic meeting that some of the victims had been sodomized.

Details of the sexual attacks on the victims who were molested had been a closely guarded secret. Police had wanted certain information kept secret so it could be used in polygraph tests of suspects.

Another such detail was how the victims were strangled. Police had refused to say, but the county coroner's chief investigator, Bob Danbacher, disclosed Nov. 23: "No necks were broken. There's no other marks on their bodies to indicate they were beaten."

Elected officials entered the case when it was charged that Los Angeles police refused to answer a call about a prostitute who failed to check in when she went to meet a client Dec 14. The woman was Kimberly Diane Martin, apparently the strangler's 11th victim.

Analysts said investors were expecting some adverse news Tuesday when the government reports on the U.S. balance of trade for November.

A large trade deficit of late has been cited as a primary reason for pressure on the dollar in foreign-exchange markets.

Warner-Lambert, the early volume leader among NYSE issues, rose 1/8 to 26 1/2.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 8.06 to 829.87, to finish the week with a 14.55 gain.

Advances outnumbered declines by better than a 2-1 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 20.08 million shares against 28.10 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose .45 to 52.26.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .68 at 126.28.

Christmas Hijacker Charged

ATLANTA (AP) — A man held for the Christmas Day hijacking of an Eastern Airlines jet faced air piracy charges before a U.S. magistrate today.

Nikolai Wischnewsky, 32, of Pearl River, N.Y., allegedly commandeered the DC-9 about 50 miles from Atlanta on Sunday using a toy pistol and a portable radio taped to resemble a bomb.

The Austrian-born landscaper was being held without bond in the Fulton County jail.

Wischnewsky boarded the Miami-Indianapolis flight in Jacksonville, Fla., FBI agents said.

Agents said the hijacker passed a flight attendant a note demanding that the plane fly to Cuba.

Women and children were allowed to leave when the aircraft landed in Atlanta at 8:20 a.m. and the FBI then persuaded the hijacker to release the rest of the 32 passengers and four crew members. Agents overpowered him a few hours later.

There were no injuries.

Police Search For Blond 5-Year-Old

ALEXANDRIA, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky State Police Detective Phil Harney said authorities continue to receive leads on a yellow van in the investigation of 5-year-old Keith Holliday's disappearance.

Keith, son of Michael and Judy Holliday, disappeared Wednesday morning. A two-day search involving more than 1,000 persons turned up no trace of the blond-haired boy, police said.

State Detective Jerry Keith said police were not certain whether the van had any connection with the disappearance. But Keith said investigators still wanted to talk to the driver.

Police described the van as yellow with spots of primer paint where rust repairs had possibly been made. Police said a witness described the van, seen in the vicinity Wednesday, as looking like a former "bread truck."

Thousands participated in mass searches of the area but no trace of the boy has been found. Kentucky State Police have not ruled out the possibility that the child may have been abducted.

The formal search of the area around the Holliday home was called off Friday but hundreds of persons continued searching through the Christmas holiday weekend.

Mush No More

Even in an age of heavy mechanization, it seems unlikely a machine could be found which can compete with an animal capable of hauling many times his own weight, travel a hundred miles a day at an 8-10 mph clip, and require only a pound of dog food for sustenance.

All of this he would do under the most severe climatic conditions. Yet, the Alaskan husky today is obsolete. With the exception of a few isolated outposts where the Eskimos are too poor to afford anything else, the husky has been replaced by the gasoline-powered snowmobile.

Most of the huskies which still survive in the North country are bred to show tourists what one of North America's most famous work animals looked like. But the cry of "mush, you husky," is heard no more.

The Silent Killer

By PHYLLIS BATTELE
NEW YORK — Hypertension is known as the "silent killer" because it usually produces no symptoms - even though it is the single leading cause for disability and death in the U.S.

"Sometimes, the first sign of hypertension is a heart attack or stroke," says Dr. John Laragh, founder of the country's first hypertension center.

A major problem is that the term "hypertension" is misunderstood.

"In everybody's mind, hypertension implies an emotional or psychological state. It is thought of as an affliction of nervous, pressured, tense people. This is largely untrue.

"A lot of calm, easygoing people, who feel good and are under no particular stress, have high blood pressure. Hypertension is purely a physical state. Blood is rushing around our systems under great pressure, and in some unsuspecting people there is so much pressure that the blood vessels break."

If an artery feeding the brain should burst, the brain is robbed abruptly of its blood supply and oxygen; the damage is called a stroke. High blood pressure, in addition, forces the heart to work harder, may cause it to enlarge and demand more oxygen than the circulatory system can provide. The results of untreated high blood pressure are sudden, often fatal; and in the majority of the cases, the victims are unaware that they were in any danger.

"That's why it's called the silent killer," says Laragh. "They feel fine, until the dam breaks."

Laragh (Lair'-uh) won the coveted Stouffer Prize in 1969 for his research into high blood pressure. His studies revealed the role of hormone action in cases of hypertension. This led to his development of "hormonal profiling" - a computer-aided analysis of the patient's hormonal output - which enables doctors to differentiate among patients with so-called essential hypertension. Named the "renin profile" (for renin, a kidney hormone which is produced in response to a drop in blood pressure), the procedure "tells us what kind of a specific blood pressure problem exists," says Laragh.

"Hypertensive patients with low renin are less in danger of developing heart attacks or strokes. Those with high renin levels can be helped with medicines that will slow or even stop production of the hormone. Until we figured out just what renin did," Laragh explains, "we conducted therapy on a hit-or-miss basis - try a drug, and if it didn't work, switch to another one. Now we can tell in advance what to try."

The renin profile test is now available at a large number of commercial laboratories and hospitals around the country. It is a breakthrough in understanding the silent killer; for, in spite of the fact that hypertension is the single leading cause of death in the U.S., doctors still are not sure what causes it. Several factors are believed to be involved, ranging from obesity and diet, to stress and heredity. It strikes across the board, crossing lines of sex and age (even infants can have high blood pressure, though this is rare) and race (for reasons as yet unknown, blacks are more prone to hypertension than whites. One out of every four adult black Americans has high blood pressure compared to one out of seven whites).

Laragh, 52, founded the country's first hypertension center in 1971, at Manhattan's Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center. In 1975, he transferred his research, testing and treatment techniques to The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

There, he tests thousands of patients for hypertension, and urges people to have their blood pressure checked regularly.

"The real solution to heart attack and stroke as the nation's number one health problem is prevention," he says. "And we can cure the problem, once we know it exists."

"We now have a host of drugs - 15 or 20 types - to take care of high blood pressure. They can be customized to individual patients, with individual hypertensive diseases." Though many of the reasons for escalating blood pressure are not known, specialists like Laragh realize that cases differ, and so does treatment: "In this business, what's good for the goose is not necessarily good for the gander." But most, if discovered early, can be kept under control.

So go in and have your pressure checked often: "It's a lifetime guarantee . . ."

Business World

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) - Americans really went on a spending binge in the final weeks of the year, and there are indications that a good percentage of the purchases didn't end up under the Christmas tree.

They were consumed instead, literally swallowed, in the form of food and drink. Or so it would seem.

Final figures won't be available for a couple of more weeks, but we do know this: Food store sales in November rose 2.9 percent over those of October, suggesting an amazing increase in intake.

True, some of these purchases might have made gifts, but another set of statistics suggest otherwise. November sales at eating and drinking places leaped 2.1 percent after having been weak in October.

Economists are now studying such statistics to find out what they can about the behavior of the sometimes unpredictable consumer. They have already drawn some conclusions:

—The public was in more of a buying mood than was generally foreseen. The buying began unusually early; October retail sales leaped 2.7 percent over September, and November added another 1.5 over October.

—Early reports of a 1.5 percent increase in the dollar value of automotive purchases for November are suspect.

—There is a possibility that revisions will trim the November auto component of retail sales," Citibank comments. For one thing, it questions that unit sales would be down but dollar sales up so much.

—Shoppers apparently were not reluctant to use credit. That, at least, was the trend that seemed to be setting in early in the final quarter of the year.

Contrary to what some people might expect, consumers assume credit burdens when they feel confident - not when the absence of ready cash leaves them on their choice.

Personal incomes were up; people were confident; they took on credit.

This burst of consumer activity now presents analysts with the question of how much longer it might continue. Some credit critics say the burden of repayments could hamper sales in 1978.

Another school of thought, however, observe that consumers are still able to repay their borrowings on time. They feel that 1978 sales might indeed be affected by activity this year, but merely because consumers have already purchased many of the items they need.

Whatever, the indomitable consumer has again surprised some of those who claim the tit of expert, and has almost made certain a continuation of the expansion into a fourth year.

He might have done it with food and drink and a lot of gifts that the recipient is inclined to return, but that's the way the economy turns.

A low pressure system moved into Ohio overnight, leaving a light dusting of snow over most of the state.

A southwest flow of air combined with clouds ahead of the system to hold temperatures to milder levels than had been expected. Overnight lows were generally in the teens.

Snowfall amounts were less than one-half inch. The low pressure trough will move out of the state by noon.

Snow flurries will persist in the east through this afternoon and possibly along the east shore of Lake Erie through evening. Accumulation will generally be less than one inch, but the northeast snow belt could get 2-3 inches.

Afternoon temperatures should be between 15 and 20 today. Clearing skies and light winds will allow temperatures to drop to between zero and 10 above tonight.

Milder air will spread into Ohio Wednesday, with afternoon readings in the low to mid 20s.

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

My husband seems to fall apart with any pain or ache. He just doesn't seem able to handle any kind of pain. Generally speaking, don't you think women are able to take pain better than men?

Mrs. E. F., Ill.

Dear Mrs. F.:

I don't know of any in-depth studies that have revealed women's ability to tolerate pain as compared with men.

My personal experience, however, is that women do, indeed, handle pain better and continue to function with pain more readily than men.

There are many variables that determine the capacity to tolerate pain. This is known as the "threshold" for pain. Even those with a high tolerance for pain may, under certain circumstances, find that this is lowered. When there is additional emotional stress, even those who can accept a great deal of pain may find that their tolerance is lowered and that they react more severely than usual.

The capacity to withstand pain is not a comparative game. Children and adults should not be stigmatized when they react more actively than is commonly expected.

Some people cannot tolerate the slightest pain associated with drilling of the teeth. Others can sit through the most exhaustive sessions in the dentist's office, without a complaint.

Stoicism and the tolerance for pain can be acquired. I have found that when patients are armed with the truth, when their fears are allayed and when their anxiety level is reduced their threshold for pain improves.

Patient understanding, rather than condemnation, is in order if physical and emotional pain are to be made more tolerable.

I have a hooked nose. My problem is that I can't breathe well through it unless I raise the tip. Is it possible to have this fixed? I'm 27.

Mr. B.O.T., Mass.

Dear Mr. O.T.:

You describe so well a condition known as the "hanging tip syndrome." Many people, even those without a hooked nose, find that by elevating the tip they can breathe more easily.

Sometimes, a deviation of the septum is present and interferes with the free flow of air to the nose. The septum is the cartilage that divides one side of the nose from the other.

The "hanging tip" can be easily repaired. Very often people elect to have cosmetic plastic surgery done at the same time, especially if there is a marked deformity of the nose. In this way, the appearance and the ability to breathe are both improved.

Primrose Magoo

By JIM BISHOP

The bellman recognized him. So did most people in the lobby of the Beverly Hilton. He lifted the cigar from his face and smiled at the room clerk. He looked like Jack Paar. He was as nervous as Jack Paar. He was Jack Paar. He signed the register "Mr. Primrose Magoo."

The clerk spun the register. "Yessir, Mr. Magoo," he said. He punched a bell. "Take Mr. Magoo to his suite." Paar leaned across the desk. He became confidential. "I'm tired of the phone ringing all the time," he whispered. "Phones, favors, autographs — you know." The clerk nodded.

In the elevator, the star and bellman kept their eyes on the numbered floors overhead. Paar followed the man and the luggage. He examined the rooms. Excellent. Early Darryl Zanuck. A clear view of an oil well. The blinds were raised, the air conditioning hummed, the television set was tested for color.

The palm was up. Paar dropped a tip on it. The star picked up a phone. "In case anybody calls me," he said, "I'm Primrose Magoo." The operator sounded puzzled. "Of course, Mr. Magoo," she said. Paar whispered: "What I mean is, I'm not Jack Paar."

The operator was worried. "Why should anyone who wants Mr. Magoo ask for Jack Paar?" she said. He phoned NBC in New York. "Mitzel," he said, "I'm at the Beverly Hilton in Los Angeles. If you want me for anything, just ask for Primrose Magoo. What? I'm Primrose Magoo, damn it. You don't have to spell it, dear. I'll pick up the phone. Anything new . . . ?"

Mr. Paar, at his finest, is as nervous as Miss America with a pimple. As sensitive as a bride who finds she's alone at the altar. He faints at unexpected telegrams. Now, in his privacy, he wanted to call Mrs. Paar, but forgot his home phone number.

It was unlisted. At that time, he was unlisted in Bronville, although since he has been unlisted in Key Biscayne and Connecticut. Information refused to give him the number. He called a few members of his cast instead. "I'm here under the name of Primrose Magoo," he said, in the manner of a spy telling a secret secret. "What? I wish you were that funny on the program, pal."

He had his privacy. Nobody called. Everything was silent. He reveled in it for 10 full minutes. "This," he told himself, "is great. Simply great." On a closet shelf he found a Bible. It was inscribed by someone who forged the signature of Cecil B. DeMille.

Paar investigated the bathroom. He tried the faucets. The hot water emitted hot water. The cold gushed cold. He decided he could no longer endure this magnificent loneliness without the voice of Miriam Paar. He called again.

How ridiculous not to remember one's home number. He looked out the window. The oil well was still rocking like a dirty cradle. "Honey," he said into the phone, "get me information in Bronville, New York." He spun the cigar slowly in his mouth.

"Hello. Bronville? Good. This is Jack Paar. I'm in California and I feel embarrassed, but I have to admit I forgot my home phone number. Now what I'd like you to do — What? You must be kidding.

"Come on, dear. I know it's unlisted and you know it's unlisted. But it's my number, honey. Wait a minute. Just a minute. Have you ever listened to the Jack Paar program? A million times? Good. Recognize the voice? I . . . am . . . Jack Paar. Right. That makes everything simple.

"What do you mean — you can't? Now look here, Miss. I happens to be my phone and I pay the bills and I want the number. Why don't you buzz Mrs. Paar and ask her if she would like to speak to her lawfully wedded husband? What do you mean, supervisor? Who's that?

"This is too much. Tell you what you do. Now don't hang up. I know that rules are rules. I can even tell you what the number was before we changed it. You're not interested? If I remembered the new number would I be on my knees begging?

"All right. Okay. Your supervisor says that you must make sure that this is really, truly Jack Paar speaking to you from out in California. Now we're talking. Now we're on the same wavelength. Now we're getting somewhere, honey.

"All you have to do to check it is to call me at the Beverly Hilton Hotel in Los Angeles. Got that? Just call right back. Call collect. Then you'll be sure.

"What, dear? Oh no. Just ask for Primrose Magoo."

Government Has 2 Guidelines On Payment For Abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government employees relying on federal money for abortions are judged by a different standard than poor women who need help for the same treatment.

Congress approved restrictions earlier this month on when Medicaid funds can be used for abortions. They call for federal payments only when a woman might die because of a pregnancy or when two physicians certify that she would suffer serious, long-lasting physical damage because of a pregnancy.

Memberships Due For Farm Bureau

Pickaway County Farm Bureau President Bill Walker, urges all Farm Bureau Members to complete and return their 1978 membership dues notices since insurance coverage and other benefits end December 31.

He said the county Farm Bureau has begun its 1978 membership drive with the mailing of dues notices to all Pickaway Farm Bureau members. Walker is hoping for a return of 90 percent — enough to give membership workers a good start when they conduct their intensive, six day drive on Jan. 12.

In 1978 the organization goal will be 645 members and will make the six consecutive year of growth.

"Farmers and rural residents need Farm Bureau more than ever," said President, Bill Walker. "Farmers in Ohio are suffering from depressed grain prices and the Ohio Farm Bureau is working hard to help correct this situation and it needs total support from all farmers."

Rape or incest victims who promptly report the incidents to authorities also are covered for abortion payments.

But Medicaid is not the only way that government money pays for the procedure.

Members of Congress themselves are among the 2.8 million active federal employees who can receive indirect federal assistance through subsidized insurance plans should they or their family members choose abortions.

In addition, 10 million active or retired civil servants and their dependents are covered through federally funded insurance programs, on which the government spent $1.3 billion this year.

The General Accounting Office has ruled that federal employee health programs are not affected by the restrictions.

Another 7.5 million military personnel worldwide are covered through an extensive health care system, including military hospitals or federal subsidies for private health care.

The Defense Department says military hospitals performed 12,687 abortions between Sept. 1, 1975, and Aug. 31, 1976, while 13,090 abortions were given to military personnel or their dependents in the same period through a private health care system.

The government also underwrites countless other abortions indirectly through subsidies to hospitals. The federal government spent $21.4 billion for subsidies to the 7,000 hospitals in the United States in fiscal year 1976.

And taxpayers who choose to have abortions can write them off as medical expenses on their income tax returns, just as they can any other medical expense.

Both supporters and opponents of federal payments for poor women's abortions say the distinction is unfair. Abortion supporters say poor women are discriminated against, while opponents say abortion shouldn't be paid for with federal money at all.

62-Year-Old Woman Sits Out Fine

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Anne Semenoff says the Pima County Jail, where she is spending two days for refusing to pay a $23 traffic fine, isn't so bad.

"This isn't such a bad place," she said Thursday. "It's clean and interesting. I had a very good bologna sandwich for lunch, and these jailers do seem to bend over backwards to be nice."

Mrs. Semenoff, 62, was cited for making an improper left turn, but says she did not cross a solid line as an officer claimed and should have been given a warning, not a citation. Her son says she refused his help when he offered to pay the fine.

Dear Abby:

By Abigail VanBuren

Time To Start Up When So Far Down

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for six years to a man who has some kind of hold on me and I can't shake it. I loved him once, but all my love for him is gone now. I've left him 11 times but he always begs me to come back and says if I don't he'll commit suicide, so I go back to him. We have two kids who are practically being raised by my mother because my husband refuses to work steady. He has a bad drinking problem, too. I can't count the places we've been kicked out of because we couldn't pay rent; we can't get credit anyplace.

When he met me I was really no good. I was a 16-year-old prostitute with a drug habit. He keeps reminding me that he took me out of the gutter so I owe him my life.

Can you help me?

TRAPPED
DEAR TRAPPED: No. But you can help yourself. You need counseling, and so does your husband. There are mental health clinics in your area that offers excellent help, and it's free for those without funds. If your husband refuses to go, go without him. Don't let your past dictate your future. You need a better self-image, and the fact that you wrote to me indicates that you're looking for answers, which is half the battle. Get going and good luck.

DEAR ABBY: Why is the bride expected to write all the thank-you notes for the wedding gifts?

Most of the gifts are for the home—to be shared by the couple. So assuming the husband isn't illiterate, why shouldn't he write half the notes?

JUST ASKING

DEAR JUST: Nowhere is it written that the bride should write all the thank-you notes for the wedding gifts. Acknowledging wedding gifts should

MISS CONSTANTINE
MR. McFERREN

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Constantine of Alexandria Bay, New York are announcing the engagement of their daughter Sharon to Mr. William McFerren, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Leighton E. McFerren, 439 Watt St.

Miss Constantine is a graduate of North Quincy High School and received an associate of arts degree from Eastern Nazarene College, Quincy, Mass.

Mr. McFerren is a graduate of Circleville High School.

Both are students of Mid-America Nazarene College, Olathe, Kansas, where Miss Constantine is a junior majoring in religious education and Mr. McFerren is a speech communication senior. Mr. McFerren is also studying broadcasting journalism at the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kansas.

DEAR ABBY: I recently went to the hospital for some exploratory surgery as I was concerned about the possibility of cancer. Two neighbor women, whom I do not know very well, came to visit me there. They took turns asking prying questions as to the nature of my illness, whether more surgery would be necessary, etc. I tried to fend off these questions as best I could.

After they left, a member of a fraternal group to which I belong called me. The same line of questioning was pursued. Only this person spent nearly an hour telling me about "similar cases" in which all the patients died—of cancer. I was depressed beyond words. Why do people visit the sick and leave them sicker?

DEPRESSED
DEAR DEPRESSED: Because common sense is so uncommon. My advice on bedside manner: Make your visit short, sweet and cheerful. Leave the coughs and the kids at home. Ask no questions. If you can't do that, stay away.

What kind of day will tomorrow be? To find out what the stars say, read the forecast given for your birth sign.

FOR WEDNESDAY

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 20): Break your program down to definite essentials and eliminate the unimportant. Do not engage in unfamiliar ventures except where "dry runs" seem feasible.

TAURUS (Apr. 21 to May 21): Some complications indicated in job matters. Beware of instability, emotionalism. Consult with others as the best way to get on the productive road.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21): Wait for cues before launching any project. An activity-happy person such as yourself could get into difficult situations if not on guard.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23): You may now expect a "different" approach from others; also a real surprise. Work consistently on endeavors which net big dividends. Your prestige increases.

LEO (July 24 to Aug. 23): Avoid needless anxiety and tension. You can deal effectively with difficult assignments by being your inherently ingenious and far-seeing self.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 to Sept. 23): Make your schedule a flexible one. There are possibilities of change and variation in certain situations — all promising to be beneficial.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23): Be realistic now and pursue only worthwhile goals. Take temporary delays in stride. Opportunity offered through clever use of your creative ability.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 23): Ingenuity and a fresh approach to certain situations could brighten this day considerably. Soft-pedal complaints and curb your innate aggressiveness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21): Better advantages than you may anticipate. An especially good period for revitalizing projects which you may have considered dropping.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Don't be thrown off guard by fancy-sounding, but possibly misleading, propositions. Study the overall picture. Where there's REAL value, however, don't hesitate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Exercise your keen mental faculties. Some indicated opportunities may be missed if you are too hasty or, worse, indifferent.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): You may run into some opposition but you need not let it disturb your equilibrium or your sense of humor. You usually enjoy outwitting opposing forces.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a brilliant intellect and are capable of superior achievement. Along with this, if properly developed, you are gifted with spiritual qualities of the highest order. You have lofty moral standards and actually suffer when others will not or cannot live in accordance with your sense of values. Try to overcome this tendency and adopt a policy of "live and let live." You will be a lot happier. Studious and scholarly, you would make an outstanding educator and your gift with words could lead to eminent success as a writer or lecturer. Other fields in which you could succeed: the law, statesmanship, science and business management. Traits to curb: moodiness, hypersensitivity, jealousy. Federal Aid Shifts To New England Area

WASHINGTON (AP) — The regional allocation of federal aid has shifted in favor of the New England states in response to local economic needs, a federal study concludes.

A key reason for the recent boost in per capita federal aid to the Northeast is the region's large welfare rolls and high unemployment, the study says.

The General Accounting Office, in a report released on Thursday, said the flow of federal money from 1969 to 1975 showed that regional disparities lessened during that period.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Minimum wage in Ohio will increase 20 cents an hour on Jan. 1 to $2.30 an hour. At the same time, the federal minimum wage will increase from $2.30 to $2.65.

Jack Klein, legal adviser for the Department of Industrial Relations, explained the difference:

"The Ohio General Assembly voted in 1976 to graduate the state minimum wage, which was then at $1.60 an hour, up to the federal wage level of $2.30," Klein said. "A grace period of 16 months was set during which higher wage rates were to be enforced every six months."

"Back in 1976, the Ohio Legislature was not anticipating a further increase as mandated by the federal government just recently," Klein said. "Until the Ohio Legislature moves to increase the wage rate once again, the state minimum wage will remain at $2.30."

"The Northeast, while its population grew most gradually and its unemployment rate rose to highest in the nation, began to receive a greater percentage of federal aid than it paid in federal taxes," said the agency.

"Those regions in a relative economic decline are gaining relatively in federal aid," the GAO said. "Thus, the complex formulas and other factors that determine the flow of aid do seem responsive to changing conditions."

The GAO said simply, "The federal system is a method of redistributing income," and the Treasury Department explained, "The goal of federal policies should not be to return funds to each state in proportion to its tax contributions, but rather to insure that expenditures are made in response to need for these expenditures."

Officials in the industrial states cite deteriorating economic conditions to argue for a "winners" share of the federal pie. They say they need more federal money — just as southern and Appalachian states depended heavily on Washington during temporary periods of economic hardship.

The GAO study included a list of winners and losers revealing which states contribute more money — per resident — in personal income tax revenues to Washington than is returned in federal aid.

The GAO cautioned, "Some states are more in need of aid than others, and naturally these may not be the states with the highest income levels, and therefore the highest tax receipts."

The big losers, in unqualified terms of dollars and cents, are the high-income industrial states of Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, New Jersey and Ohio, along with Florida.

Other, less drastic, losers were California, Colorado, Delaware, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, Pennsylvania, Texas, Virginia, Washington and Wisconsin.

The big winners included most growing states: the entire Southeast except Florida, most of the Rocky Mountain states — Montana, Wyoming, Idaho and Utah — and Alaska, Arkansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, New Mexico, New York, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Vermont and West Virginia.

Defense Budget Will Hit Record $126 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's defense budget proposal for next year will hit a record $126 billion, but sharply cut the Navy's costly ship-building plans.

Pentagon sources said the fiscal 1979 total approved by Carter is about $9.3 billion more than Congress authorized for the current 1978 fiscal year, but $9.4 billion below what the Ford administration had projected for the coming year.

Inflation will account for much of the increase, defense sources said, but the budget will still provide for about 2 percent in what specialists call "real growth" in military assets.

In line with the administration's emphasis on strengthening U.S. conventional forces assigned to Western Europe, the new budget is said to significantly increase funds for the Army to build war reserve stocks of weapons and ammunition and to beef up the anti-tank and artillery power of forces there.

Carter's decision on the budget followed meetings late last week with Defense Secretary Harold Brown and officials of the White House Office of Management and Budget.

The president roughly split the difference between the somewhat more than $127 billion recommended by Brown for the year and the $125 billion which OMB had sought as a ceiling.

During his election campaign, Carter promised a defense spending cut of $5 billion to $7 billion. Defense officials contend that, although he will propose a record high budget, Carter is meeting his commitment by slicing substantially below what Ford had publicly projected for fiscal 1979.

The Navy appears to have taken the most severe lumps. Its plans to build new warships and support vessels were trimmed about 20 percent — from 19 to 15 ships. Delayed were a nuclear powered attack submarine; a nuclear powered cruiser, which was to be the first of a new class to carry the Aegis air defense missile system; a frigate, and a support ship.

A Navy officials contend that this ultimately will mean higher costs because the ships are likely to be included in future budgets.

Army and Air Force officials expressed general satisfaction with the outcome of the budget-shaping process, although the Army appeared to come out better than the Air Force.

Buying Power Will Be Expanded

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The buying power of most low income Ohio families which use food stamps will be expanded Jan. 1, the Department of Public Welfare said Friday.

A semiannual adjustment by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to reflect changes in food prices will increase the amount of food stamps families may buy.

Under the new rules, a family of four will be able to buy stamps worth $174 each month compared to $170 worth of stamps they could buy since the last adjustment six months ago. One person households will continue to purchase $52 in food stamps.

The income ceiling for a family of four will increase from $567 to $580 a month.

About 250,000 Ohio families now receive stamps, according to Tom McDowell, chief of the bureau of food stamps in the Ohio Department of public welfare.

Natural Gas Pricing Deadlock May Scuttle Carter's Energy Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The natural gas pricing deadlock which stalled congressional action this year on President Carter's energy program may scuttle his chances of getting a comprehensive energy bill next year.

A number of key congressmen say they doubt whether the natural gas stalemate can ever be broken, at least with the current makeup of Congress, and suggest the dispute may simply be dropped.

Josephine Strian Gets Plumber's License

NEW YORK (AP) — Jane Withers she's not. Josephine the plumber she is.

Josephine Striano, 26, is the city's 1,248th licensed master plumber.

Actress Jane Withers for years has played the part of a plumber named Josephine in a household cleanser advertisement.

"When I was a little girl, I was a tomboy one day, fixing a leaky pipe, and a typical girl the next day, playing house with my girl friends," said Mrs. Striano, whose three older brothers are plumbers.

She earned her license by working for seven years with her father, George Figliola, who has been a plumber for 31 years. She also passed written and practical tests allowing her to perform work that the city's building code restricts to licensed plumbers.

Mrs. Striano has been married for three months to a court officer.

City Hall To Receive 'Fresh Air'

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — Youngstown Mayor Jack C. Hunter says he's leaving office after an unprecedented four consecutive terms in order to ventilate city hall a bit.

"I just have always thought that government needs a breath of fresh air from time to time," said the Republican mayor of this predominantly Democratic steel town. "No man can be so good that he should stay in office forever."

Hunter announced he wouldn't run for re-election earlier this year, and because of his past success, his name has been mentioned as a future candidate for the U.S. House of Representatives.

"I have had several job offers in the private sector," said the former bank executive. "The one I take will depend on whether I intend to stay in politics or to return to a fulltime professional career." Hunter said he hasn't made up his mind yet.

Nonetheless, there's a trace of regret in leaving city hall. "You realize, I have been the chief executive officer of a major, multi-million dollar corporation," he said, referring to the city. "Nothing in my life might ever be that big again."

He said his biggest achievements have been the new downtown shopping mall, improved city waste collections, better services for the elderly and creation of a public authority to take over mass transportation.

First elected in 1969, Hunter married while in office and has had three children with his wife Polly. "Our oldest, Jonathon, who is three, has an idea that I somehow work for television," Hunter said. "Whenever someone asks him where daddy works, he says 'at the office' and points to the television set."

"We may not have a gas bill. I'm at wit's end as to where we go from here," said Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., whose effort to win support for a personal appeal by President Carter to reach agreement before Christmas.

After the vote, frustrated members of the House-Senate conference committee recessed for the year. They had stayed in Washington after congressional adjournment because of a personal appeal by President Carter to reach agreement before Christmas.

Although the committee will meet again in late January, leaders were not hopeful that a breakthrough on the gas-pricing issue would come then, either.

The stalemate is jeopardizing prospects for final congressional action on the plan Carter sent Congress last April to conserve energy through federal regulation and a series of taxes on energy use.

The conference committee, which began the job of reconciling wide House and Senate differences over the energy bill three months ago, has been stalled since it took up the natural gas portion on Dec. 2.

Some key members of the panel have suggested that the gas-pricing legislation be dumped — or at least put aside — and Carter sent the fragments of his plan already tentatively agreed to by conferees.

That would be a blow to hopes by Carter and House leaders of getting a comprehensive national energy bill next year. But so far, no one in either the administration or Congress has been able to suggest a way to break the gas-pricing deadlock.

Conferees already have approved parts of the plan dealing with energy conservation, industrial conversions from oil and gas to coal, and electric rate-setting.

Although Carter made retention of price controls on natural gas a key part of his plan, Congress has been battling the issue of controls versus deregulation for more than 20 years without reaching agreement.

Both House and Senate are near evenly divided on the issue, with a slight edge in the House in favor of keeping controls and an equally thin margin in the Senate for lifting them.

The House passed Carter's plan to continue controls at somewhat higher levels. But the Senate voted to lift the price ceilings after two years.

Although House conferees have proposed several middleground compromises between these two extremes, Senate negotiators have been unable to agree among themselves on any compromise proposal.

Conferees are also in disagreement over Carter's proposal for a tax on crude oil that would raise the price of gasoline and other petroleum products by an estimated 7 cents a gallon.

Mysterious Blasts Could Be Caused By Garbage Dumps

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Those mysterious booms high in the sky off the Atlantic Coast could be caused by exploding gas bubbling up from underwater garbage dumps, says one scientist.

That is one theory. Others speculate that they are sonic booms or come from outer space.

New explosions were heard Wednesday night by several residents along the New Jersey coastline.

"My whole house shook," said Ted Weeks, a fisherman at Barnegat Light. "Almost immediately the second report followed, but not near as loud. It was very distinct. The whole of Long Beach Island, I'm sure, heard it. You had to be dead not to have heard it."

Two similar but stronger blasts startled residents from Connecticut to South Carolina on Dec. 2.

Scientists at Columbia University's Lamont-Doherty Geophysical Observatory in Palisades, N.Y., said its instruments recorded those booms and five more on Dec. 15.

The equipment did not register Wednesday's reported blasts.

The explosions have been accompanied by reports of lights in the sky, sometimes a luminous glow.

Dr. Edward Chiburif, assistant director of the Weston Observatory of Boston College, said he suspects the sounds are sonic booms.

Dr. William Donn, head of atmospheric sciences at the Lamont-Doherty Observatory, said he was sure they are not sonic booms.

Ocean County, N.J., civil defense authorities said they had confidential information the blasts occurred in outer space. Federal officials discounted the outer space theory.

The garbage gas theory comes from Dr. Stanley Klemetsen, environmental engineering researcher and associate professor of civil engineering at Colorado State University.

He said it is likely that a build-up of sludge deposits on the ocean bottom from dumping of treated wastes and garbage has produced anaerobic gases such as hydrogen and methane.

"As these gases accumulate beneath the sludge, sufficient quantity can collect to break through the layer and rise to the surface of the ocean," he said.

If warmer than the surrounding air, the gas will rise into the atmosphere, he said.

"Natural static electricity caused by wind friction is sufficient to set off the explosions," Klemetsen said.

Klemetsen noted that the blasts have been occurring over the general area where refuse from large coastal cities such as New York is dumped.

Warehouses Popular For Tree Storage

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — When you take that brightly decorated Christmas tree down after the holidays, you might want to make it easy on yourself and store it in a warehouse until next year.

One of William D. Sutterfield's customers does just that. She rents space in Sutterfield's personal storage warehouse to house her fully trimmed, nine-foot artificial tree.

It's just one of the many uses people are finding for the you-store-it, mini-warehouse business that began in Texas 10 years ago, and reached the Columbus area in 1975.

The growth of the business has been rapid, fueled at least in part by the imagination of its customers.

"One couple's son had a car he was allowed to use as long as he kept up his high school grades," said Sutterfield, who operates three Secure-It warehouses in Columbus. "When (the grades) went down the parents would hide his car there until he brought his grades back up."

Another of Sutterfield's customers stores a collection of about 20 mounted animal heads in a rented miniature warehouse.

One man probably will be moving out of his unit soon, Sutterfield said. The man is assembling an airplane in the rented warehouse space and when all the components are in place, the craft will no longer fit. And another man, an outdoorsman, stores a recreational vehicle in his rented warehouse, Sutterfield said.

"I'm at the point where it's all routine with me and nothing seems unusual anymore," Sutterfield said.

The Columbus Police Department came up with one of the more imaginative uses earlier this year for the personal warehouses. Police investigators rented a unit from the Vince K. Oliver Co. and used it to store stolen goods they had purchased through a phony "fencing" operation, said Mary Anne Decker of the Oliver company.

Other people put the storage bins to more common use, such as for storing tools and furniture, said Robert Taggart of Taggart-Marryott Co. Realtors.

Mrs. Decker attributes the advent of the small-storage units to economics. The Oliver company, for example, found the warehouse business slack in 1975, so it partitioned a 25,000-square-foot warehouse into 250 miniature storage units.

Taggart followed suit the following year, converting a 9,600-foot warehouse into 88 individual units. He now is a partner in three Secur-It operations totaling 188,000 square feet and two more projects are under construction.

The units vary in size from 4-by-6 feet and 5-by-5 feet, to larger units of around 10-by-30 feet. Some have outside doors, and others have door accessible only from inside the building.

Monthly rents range upward from about $7 for smaller sizes. Formal rents are not necessary, Sutterfield said. People either pay their rent or they find a new lock on the door, he said.

Transit Strike Talks To Resume

CINCINNATI (AP) — Both transit and union officials expressed a hope that talks will resume today in the 20-day-old strike by drivers and mechanics.

Transit officials also said Monday they planned to go back to court in another attempt to force strikers to return to work.

Ed Harvey, general manager of Queen City Metro, said he planned to contact officials of the Amalgamated Transit Union for further discussions.

Gene Metz, union president, said he hoped talks will resume this week.

More than 800 Queen City drivers and mechanics walked off the job Dec. 8 in a wage dispute. Union officials said the strike was not authorized because the members are public employees. The company claims an estimated 65,000 persons ride the public transit system daily.

The union membership rejected four contract proposals, the last three because the municipally-owned transit system wants the new contract to expire after a pre-Christmas date.

Present top hourly pay is $6.56. In the last offer, Queen City offered $7.80 by Jan. 1, 1980, with free medical insurance.

Harvey said Queen City planned to offer testimony to Hamilton County Common Pleas Court Judge William R. Mathews on individuals who failed to comply with the judge's earlier back-to-work order.

Rain Expected Through Wednesday

By The Associated Press

A wet weather system covers the Pacific Coast with rain, snow, fog and clouds, while a mass of arctic air is nipping at the East today.

Sometimes heavy rain pelted much of California Monday with more expected today, including snow at higher elevations. The precipitation is expected to continue through Wednesday. The same weather system kept a light rain falling across Arizona Monday and forecasters said it could continue for several days.

Patchy fog was expected in some areas of Washington State today, with mostly fair skies across much of the state. Temperatures are below the freezing point across the state and across much of Oregon. Winds sometimes gusted to 30 mph in parts of Oregon Monday.

Temperatures were in the 30s, 40s and 50s across cloudy New Mexico. The temperatures were about the same, but the skies were clear across Utah.

Clear to partly cloudy skies are expected across Colorado, with mild temperatures.

Montana has partly cloudy skies with scattered light snow in the mountains. Parts of Wyoming were dusted with light snow Monday. Light snow was expected in Idaho today where fog yesterday created widespread highway problems.

The cold weather in the East is caused by a mass of arctic air pouring in from the upper Great Lakes and Wisconsin.

Massachusetts expected high temperatures to be in the 20s today under clear skies. Northern New England also has clear skies, with a chance of some flurries later today.

Heavy snow and high winds along Lake Erie Monday stranded motorists and closed a section of Interstate 90 in Pennsylvania.

Travelers advisories for heavy snow squalls remained in effect today across much of upstate New York. Buffalo expected up to six inches today in high winds. New York City has clear skies with temperatures in the 20s.

Occasional light snow continues to fall on the Maryland Mountains. Skies

are cloudy across much of Maryland and Delaware.

Virginia is under partly cloudy skies with temperatures getting down near five degrees at higher elevations.

A large high pressure system is dominating the weather picture in the Southeast, bringing frosty temperatures, but clear skies to wide areas.

Some snow flurries were expected today in the North Carolina mountains. Clear skies and cool weather are expected today over much of Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia.

Florida is braced for cooler temperatures, at the freezing point on the northern part of the state. Temperatures in the Miami area were expected to dip below 50.

Generally fair and cool weather prevails over Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana.

Clear weather prevails over Kansas and Missouri, with seasonably cool temperatures and some high wind.

Illinois temperatures today range from zero in the northern part of the state to the teens in southern areas. Minnesota and Wisconsin had temperatures below zero, with the mercury expected to drop to lower than 15-below-zero in some parts of Wisconsin and to 10-below in Southern Minnesota. Skies were clear across Indiana.

Snow fell across upper Michigan over the Christmas weekend, with more expected in some parts today. A 45-year record snowfall for a 24 hour period was recorded at midnight, Monday — 9.9 inches at Sault Ste. Marie.

Early morning temperatures around the nation ranged from 23 degrees below zero at Warroad, Minn., to 65 degrees at San Diego.

Creative Play Leads To Good Behavior

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Teaching children creative play may pay off in better behavior, according to a Columbus pediatrician.

"Learn ways of building self-esteem in your child and yourself," Dr. Sandra M. Stewart recommends.

For example, in a hiding game, hide a letter instead of a button, and when he finds it tell the child, "You found a letter H," Dr. Stewart said. "I don't want the parent to say to the child, 'what is this?' He says 'A,' and the parent says, 'No! That's an H,'" she said, because that is a failure for the child.

An extra benefit from this type of play may be the "awakening of the imaginative, creative, emotional, playful child in you."

Teaching creative play helps develop the child's left-brain, and this is the key to better behavior, said Dr. Stewart.

"Until (a child's) left brain develops, he's not going to do (something) just because you tell him to," she said.

Dr. Stewart explained that the left side of a person's brain handles mostly logical and analytical problems, such as following directions.

The right side of the brain is impulsive, Dr. Stewart said. The right side is more oriented to relying on experience for its information, and is more sensitive to gestures — body language — than words.

"You're practicing a nice left-brain skill when you're reading," she said. "Watching television, unfortunately, is a very right-brain activity."

Dr. Stewart works primarily with children at Columbus Children's Hospital who have learning or behavior problems.

In a very small percentage of these cases "there may be a genetic problem in which more of their brain is specialized in right-brain thinking than in left-brain thinking," she said.

Most of the children "would have been perfectly okay if they had not been put in school until age eight" when their left brain was ready to handle school situations, Dr. Stewart said.

She is most interested in the children whose brains are "destined to be normal, but they live very stressful lives ..."

These stresses involve such things as diet, sleep and television habits, the doctor said.

"I'm afraid there's a lot of those kids," she said.

Dr. Stewart said that even if a child is normal, he's likely to be using his right brain at home, particularly after a day of school.

If the child misbehaves, "telling him the rule and punishing him is not likely to work," she said. Instead, she recommends trying to modify the child's behavior by distracting him with something else when he gets into something he shouldn't.

With an older child, Dr. Stewart said parents can make a contract, promising to do something for him in exchange for improved behavior.

"A lot of parents seem to get too upset when children don't obey," said

Dr. Sandra M. Stewart. "They want the child to obey just because they said so, but that's really unrealistic."

March Against Birth Defects Scheduled

Leora Sayre has been chosen chairman of the Circleville Mothers March of birth defects.

Held every January for the past 26 years, the neighbor-to-neighbor campaign is sponsored by the March of Dimes. In 1977 we raised the largest amount of money in the history of the Circleville Mothers March. In 1978 we MUST meet it or top the amount from last year. The March of Dimes uses the funds for programs aimed at prevention of birth defects — our nation's number one child health problem.

Aiming for the day when all children can be born free from the threat of birth defects, the March of Dimes funds numerous research programs. They also support special maternal-infant health care, genetic services, public and professional health education, and community services. The Central Ohio Chapter March of Dimes is currently making funds available to purchase an Eye-tone machine, for testing glucose, to be used by Dr. Emily Lutz of the Berger Hospital in Circleville.

Volunteers are needed for the Mothers March, which will be held January 22-29. Anyone interested in helping should contact Leora Sayre at 474-3952.

Two Local Music Students Are Featured

Steven Edman and Randall Wolfe, both students at Circleville High School and members of the CHS choir, have been selected to be represented in the 1978 edition of "Who's Who in Music", a publication honoring the "most outstanding high school music students" in the United States.

Deborah Fannin, Choral Director at CHS and head of the school's nominating committee, made the announcement.

The two students were nominated for the honor "based on their music ability, academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extra-curricular activities, and future potential."

Edman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Edman, 582 Hickory Place, and Wolfe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. Wolfe, 1257 Edgewood Drive.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Harold's car, stolen from a parking lot, was quickly recovered only a block away. But his beloved golf clubs were missing from the trunk. Could he hold the parking lot liable for his loss?

In a court hearing, Harold demanded compensation. He argued that when the lot took responsibility for his car, it also took responsibility for "normal" contents—such as golf clubs.

But the court turned Harold down. Even though many motorists are golfers, said the court, a parking lot need not assume there is a set of clubs in every trunk.

Generally speaking, a parking lot is not responsible for a car's undisclosed contents. In fact, there may be some doubt of liability even if the contents are disclosed.

In another case a man who left his car overnight in a parking garage reported the theft of $25,000 in jewelry. Claiming damages from the garage, he pointed out in court that he had called the attendant's attention to the jewelry.

But the court denied his claim, saying it was unreasonable for him to think the night attendant at a garage would have the authority to take on such a major responsibility.

"The (company) is in the business of storing cars," said the court, "not jewelry."

In most cases, however, an attendant's promise to "keep an eye on" a car's contents is held legally binding on the company. One woman, leaving her car in a parking structure, asked the manager if the dresses she had in the back seat would be safe.

"Definitely," he replied. But the dresses did vanish and the woman did sue.

At the trial the company protested that the manager had "exceed his authority" under company rules. But the court said it must pay anyhow. The court said the woman, knowing nothing of the company's internal arrangements, had every reason to rely on what the manager told her.

Farmer Gets Less, Middleman Gets More Of Food Dollar

WASHINGTON (AP) — The middlemen in the grocery business are taking more of the consumer's food dollar, new government figures show, while the farmer's share is going down.

The Agriculture Department says farmers in November received 38.5 cents of each $1 spent for food in retail stores, while middlemen — those who transport, process and sell food after it leaves the farm — got 61.5 cents.

In October, farmers got 39 cents and middlemen 61 cents.

The figures are based on a 65-item list of food items which originate on U.S. farms. Seafood, imported products and restaurant meals are not included in the analysis.

The new figures tend to support longstanding complaints by farmers, who say consumers don't understand that middlemen account for most of the average family's grocery bill.

When the middleman price spread is measured another way, the gap between farmers and consumers is even larger, the department says.

For example, for total food purchases in 1977, farmers are getting 31.1 cents of each $1 consumers spend, and middlemen are getting 68.9 cents.

Thus, if a hypothetical basket of food could be put together and sold for $18 to reflect the total food spending of consumers this year, the department says, the farmers' share would be $5.60 and middlemen would get $12.40.

Commissioners Receive Yearly Reports

The Pickaway County Commissioners received end of the year reports from Dale Edwards, bee inspector, and Ralph Wallace, dog warden. Edwards requested a salary increase to $4.00 per hour. He reported inspecting 1,483 colonies of bees in the county and worked a total of 666 hours, during 1977.

Wallace reported that 2,676 dogs had been exterminated by the county during 1977.

The commissioners approved a request for the annexation of 6,054 acres of land to the city of Circleville. The annexation, petitioned by Fairfield Homes, Inc., Lancaster, includes Meadowview addition, northwest of the southeast line of Meadow Drive. The annexation needs the approval of city council to become official.

The commissioners will meet Tuesday, January 3, since all county offices will be closed Jan. 2.

Congress Talks 3 Volumes Full During Final Day In Session

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Words, words, words. Is it possible that even such practiced talkers as the members of the U.S. House and Senate said so much the last day they were in session in 1977?

The Congressional Record for that single day runs three volumes, more than 600 pages, at a cost of $322 a page, to record the words allegedly spoken on the floor of the two chambers.

Not even the best Senate filibusterer could read aloud that much material in less than 48 hours. Yet, the House was in session that day for six and one-half hours, the Senate for seven.

A lot of those words went unsaid. They were statements "submitted for the record" by members of Congress and inserted as though they were part of the debate.

Some people want to change that practice. Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., has campaigned, without much success, to win approval of a measure to require that the record clearly show which material was spoken on the floor and which was merely inserted.

There is a place in the record for statements. It's called "extensions of remarks" and appears at the end of each day's issue.

Every member of Congress is allowed to fill two pages a day in the extensions section, something which few do. If a member wants to insert material that runs more than two pages he must obtain permission on the floor, permission which is routinely granted.

But he also must state publicly, for the record, that he intends to insert untepen pages of material at a cost of $322 a page.

What sort of material is placed in extensions of remarks?

The last day of the session produced the expected statements on issues ranging from Social Security and crime to energy, jobs and whether the Crown of St. Stephen should be returned to Hungary.

There also was a brief tribute to the Alcoa, Tenn., high school football team which won the state Class A championship; and Rep. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., informed his colleagues that jars of South Dakota honey, contributed by Alvin C. Zietlow of Rapid City, would be found on the tables of House restaurants.

There were nice words about the University of Michigan football team, as well as about Nick Santoro of Reading, Pa., a member of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission for 37 years, and Emerson Street, who is retiring as business representative for the Santa Clara County, Calif., Central Labor Council.

Among the words spoken on the Senate floor that final day were some by Sen. S. I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., who offered two resolutions. One of them would designate Memphis, Tenn., as "The Home of the Blues," and the other would recognize blues singer Memphis Slim as an ambassador-at-large of goodwill.

Both resolutions were adopted with the hearty support of the two senators from Tennessee, neither of whom

Russian Writer Asks Countrymen For Recollections

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Russian immigrants in the United States, Europe, Australia and Japan have answered exiled Russian author Alexander Solzhenitsyn's plea for recollections of their native Russia, Solzhenitsyn's interpreter says.

Solzhenitsyn, a Nobel Prize-winning writer now living in Cavendish, recently asked his countrymen to write their recollections for use in his Russian Memorial Library.

Solzhenitsyn's family spokesman, Irene Alberti, said Monday that no material has arrived from the Soviet Union although Solzhenitsyn's request went there by radio.

"They wouldn't be able to send it by mail. We hope to eventually get some from there," she said in a telephone interview from Cavendish.

The library now is in Cavendish, but Mrs. Alberti said Solzhenitsyn hopes to some day move it to the Soviet Union.

Four of the top five teams in The Associated Press Top Twenty college basketball poll juggled positions this week after No. 2 Marquette lost to Louisville.

The Warriors, last year's national champions, were beaten 61-60 Thursday and fell to fifth while the next three teams each moved up a spot.

No. 1 Kentucky remained at the top of the heap, walloping Iowa, 104-65. The Wildcats, 8-0, received all 45 first-place votes cast by the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters for a total of 900 points.

North Carolina, 7-1, beat Tulane 108-103 to edge from third to second with 820 points.

Arkansas, 8-0, one of last year's surprise teams, beat Hardin-Simmons 86-55 and Kansas 78-72 to rise from fourth to third with 614 points.

Notre Dame, 7-1, routed St. Joseph's of Indiana 108-72 and totaled 560 points to move up from No. 5. Marquette, now 5-1, collected 519 points.

Indiana State, 7-0, did not play during the holiday week and remained sixth.

Louisville, 6-1, moved from eighth to seventh through its victory over Marquette and a 69-63 triumph over Dayton.

UCLA, 8-1, defeated San Jose State 109-69 and New Mexico State 86-67 but dropped one notch from seventh while unbeaten Nevada-Las Vegas held its ninth-place spot by edging Northwestern 100-95 and Iowa 85-84 to raise its record to 11-0.

Also holding its previous position was No. 10 Syracuse, 8-1, which was idle last week.

Cincinnati, 6-1, advanced from 12th to No. 11; Holy Cross, 6-0, moved from No. 13 to No. 12 and Providence, 6-0, rose from 14th to 13th.

Bullets Shoot Down Hawks In NBA Weekend Feature

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Atlanta Hawks must be sick of seeing the Washington Bullets ... and equally sick of losing to them.

The Hawks played the Bullets two consecutive nights in a home-and-home series and both times lost to them by identical margins — the last one a 113-106 decision Monday night.

"It's hard to win after you have beaten the same team the previous night," said Washington Coach Dick Motta. "Traditionally, teams split when they play on consecutive nights."

"But the fact that we won two nights in a row by seven points does not mean that we are seven points better than they are. It just worked out that way."

Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown felt a bit chagrined, especially with the home-court loss.

"Well," he said, "that's two tough losses for us. It's the first time in a while we've been under .500. We are 9-5 at home now. But I guess we have to be objective. It's been two sevenpoint losses to a heck of a good team."

The Bullets won the first game 100-93 Sunday night.

In Monday night's other NBA games, the Detroit Pistons defeated the Boston Celtics 122-100; the Houston Rockets tripped the Kansas City Kings 113-99 and the Denver Nuggets whipped the Phoenix Suns 127-108.

Larry Wright scored 10 of his 17 points in the final period to spur Washington over Atlanta. Atlanta scored 30 points in the last period — including 14 by Steve Hawes — but the Bullets held on to their nearly gamelone lead with the help of Wright's burst at the end.

Pistons 122, Celtics 100

Eric Money's 23 points led Detroit over Boston. Money's nine points in the third helped the Pistons to a 100-68 margin at the end of the quarter. The Celtics, who have now lost six straight and 11 straight games on the road, were led by former Piston Dave Bing with 19 points.

Rockets 113, Kings 99

Calvin Murphy and Moses Malone pumped in 22 points each to spark Houston over Kansas City. Murphy scored 20 of his points in the first half as the Rockets took an early lead and were never headed.

Nuggets 127, Suns 108

David Thompson and Dan Issel each tallied 24 points, leading six Denver players in double figures as the Nuggets defeated Phoenix. The Suns were led by Walter Davis' 23 points.

Cage Classic Gets Started

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The 42nd All-College Basketball Tournament, the country's oldest holiday cage classic, tips off Tuesday night with perhaps the best overall field it has had in several years.

First-round action Tuesday matches Arizona State, 5-4, against Oral Roberts, 4-4, at 7 p.m. (CST), to be followed by a game between host Oklahoma City, 7-2, and Boston College, 5-2.

Tournament favorite San Francisco, 6-3, goes up against highly regarded Miami, Ohio, 5-1, on Wednesday. The second game that night will match two teams with only one loss each — Texas A&M, 6-1, and Austin Peay, 4-1.

Arizona State has had an up-and-down season, but showed some muscle earlier in the year by defeating San Francisco. Guard Blake Taylor leads the Sun Devils, averaging 17.3 points per game, and fellow backcourt man Rick Taylor, no relation, has been hitting at a 14.8 clip.

Oral Roberts is the only team in the field not sporting a winning record. The young Titans are led by guard Lamont Reid with a 15-point scoring average.

Six-foot-eight center Bob Benfield is the big gun for Boston college, averaging 18 points and 11 rebounds a game. The smallest Oklahoma City Chiefs counter with a three-guard offense, led by Allen Leavell, averaging 22 points a game, and Ernie Hill, averaging 20.8.

Attendance at the tournament is expected to be much greater than in recent years, mainly because it will be a homecoming for San Francisco star Winford Boynes, a junior.

Boynes, who has been averaging better than 22 points for the Dons, was highly recruited standout from Oklahoma City Capitol Hill High School.

Semifinals Setup For NFL Super Bowl

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

And so the 1977 pro football season dwindles down to a precise few — the inexorable machine, the perennial bridesmaids, the easy riders and the rejects.

That's the order in which they square off next Sunday in the semifinal matchups for the National Football League's Super Bowl — Dallas vs. Minnesota, and Oakland vs. Denver.

An intriguing New Year's Day bill of fare, indeed, fitting subjects for Jimmy the Greek, psychologists and the millions of rocking chair buffs.

The Dallas Cowboys are the ice crushers in this bizarre scenario. Cold, seemingly bereft of emotion, they take large hunks of opponents and grind them up into small cubes — as in Monday's 37-7 rout of Walter Payton and the Chicago Bears.

They didn't emerge from a womb, as do mere mortals. They are products of IBM. From austere, unsmiling Coach Tom Landry, striding the sidelines in his pork-pie hat, dapper suit and tie, to Roger Staubach, the methodical field general. There is an exercise in expert execution and precision.

They disdain the old whoop 'em up college try. They are computerized. Touch a button and Staubach hits Drew Pearson in a seam for 15 yards. A little Houdini sleight of hand and Tony Dorsett and Robert Newhouse follow an open road for 20 more. There is a dynamite fuse at every position.

A thumbnail analysis:
Main liability: Possible absence of fire. Chief asset: Talent and organization.

The one team able to match Dallas in experience and resourcefulness is the Minnesota Vikings, who proved it with a 14-7 upset victory over the Los Angeles Rams on a drenched field.

The Vikings have made the playoffs in nine of the last 10 years and are one step away from their fifth appearance in the Super Bowl, which they have never won. They inevitably have suffered from "big gameitis."

Now with back-up quarterback Bob Lee filling in for the injured Fran Tarkenton, Chuck Foreman carrying the ball with his usual frenzy and the fabled "Purple People-Eaters" hungrier than ever, the Vikings are out to quell charges that they are chokers.

Main liability: Big game complex.

Chief asset: Chuck Foreman.

Whichever of the two survives — Cowboys or Vikings, there is little to look forward to in the Jan. 15 Super Bowl at New Orleans.

The defending champion Oakland Raiders, a wild flying wild-card qualifier, exemplify the trademark code of the American Football Conference — forget caution, storm the bastions, Heaven help the hindmost.

In another era, the Raiders would have been riverboat gamblers and barroom brawlers. They would have worn zoot suits with gold chains dangling to their kneecaps. The bearded maverick, Ken Stabler, and sure-handed Fred Biletnikoff can pick your pockets and you don't feel a thing.

It's a tough talented team that plays and lives with wild abandon.

Main liability: Looseness. Chief asset: Versatility.

The Raiders face a different kind of challenge in the Denver Broncos, a team of retdreads who found a magic potion in the rare chemistry of fierce team spirit and exuberant fan support.

Quarterback Craig Morton was cast off by the Cowboys and the New York Giants; place-kicker Jim Turner wasn't even wanted by the lowly New York Jets, Coach Red Miller, spurned by several teams, spent 17 years as an assistant before getting the Bronco job. The now famed Orange-Crush Defense used to be Orange Sherbet.

Main liability: Lack of experience and depth. Chief asset: Motivation.

Prediction: Dallas to extinguish the Vikings' new fire and Oakland bandy to fleece Denver's Orange. Then Dallas wins its second Super Bowl.

Minnesota Sinks LA Rams In Ocean Of Mud, 14-7

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Most everybody talked about the weather in Los Angeles, but the Minnesota Vikings did something about it.

Faced with surprising swamp-like conditions in the ever-dry Southern California city, the Vikings adjusted to the new scenery and came away with a 14-7 victory over the Los Angeles Rams Monday that was even more shocking than the weather.

"We knew it was tough to hold onto the ball, so we just tried to hold on, get what we could and go down and score. It was no day for heroics," said Chuck Foreman after the victory sent the Vikings into next Sunday's National Conference playoff game against the Dallas Cowboys.

The Cowboys did not surprise anyone in the other NFC playoff game Monday, bumping Chicago's wild-card Bears out of the playoff picture with a clinical, 37-7 decision.

The Minnesota-Dallas game will be one half of a championship doubleheader next weekend. The Denver Broncos will play the Oakland Raiders for the American Conference championship and the right to meet the winner of the Vikings-Cowboys game in the Super Bowl on Jan. 14 in New Orleans.

The Broncos earned a berth in the AFC title game with a 34-21 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday.

and Oakland edged the Baltimore Colts 37-31 in a double-overtime thriller.

Minnesota, a 9½-point underdog to Los Angeles, forged a 14-0 lead behind the passing of Bob Lee and the running of Foreman, then withstood some late heroics by the Rams, who scored their touchdown and had another shot at a score, all in the last minute.

The Rams, who had beaten the Vikings 35-3 earlier in the year on a sunnier field in the Los Angeles Coliseum, couldn't excuse themselves this time because, as Los Angeles Coach Chuck Knox said, "We had a couple of opportunities in the first half and we couldn't get in and that hurt us. The field conditions were terrible for both teams. It was a quagmire, but a quagmire for both teams."

The conversation in the Minnesota locker room, quite naturally, also turned to the deplorable weather and field conditions.

"Playing on a field like this is worse than snow," said Minnesota quarterback Bob Lee, who directed his team through the rain and mud to touchdown bursts by Foreman and Sammy Johnson. "You're slipping, your runners are slipping and your receivers are slipping. I think the thing that I was most impressed by was the way our ballcarriers and receivers held onto the ball. It's kind of amazing that we didn't have one turnover."

Action In Tournaments

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It was playground basketball at its best — but it was the worst kind of basketball as far as Hank Raymonds was concerned.

"You can't afford to play that kind of a game against anybody," said the Marquette coach.

Fortunately for the nation's fifth-ranked team, the Warriors could play a wild, one-on-one style instead of the classic team concept and still get away with a 17-point victory in the Milwaukee Classic Monday night.

"I don't like that kind of basketball," said Raymonds after the 90-73 victory over Eastern Kentucky. "It's my job to put a stop to it."

Marquette will have to be more disciplined tonight in the title game against Texas, a 74-73 winner over Army in the other opening-round game.

"I saw the first half of their game," said Raymonds. "Texas plays match-up defense. They move the ball very well. This is a good basketball team."

"We're going to have to control the tempo. And we've got to get the ball inside. We simply have to get the ball inside."

In other tournament action Monday night, the University of Detroit and Eastern Michigan advanced to the finals of the Motor City Classic in Detroit. The host Titans, ranked 20th in the country, whipped Harvard 77-69 and Eastern Michigan defeated Long Island University 81-70.

Marquette was led by Butch Lee's 25 points and Jerome Whitehead's 21. The Warriors charged ahead by outscoring Eastern Kentucky 17-2 in a four-minute stretch midway through the first half to lead 35-16 with 6:27 remaining before intermission. Six of the last eight points during the Warrior spurt came on long jump shots by guard Gary Rosenberger.

But Eastern Kentucky then scored nine straight points, including five by Ken Elliott, to make it 35-25 with 3:43 left in the half. Marquette responded with a 10-3 spree, including five points by Lee, that made it 45-28 at the half, and the Warriors maintained the lead throughout the second half.

Texas survived a late Army comeback and beat the Cadets with John Moore and Tyrone Branyan hitting key free throws in the closing seconds. The Longhorns won their eighth straight game after an opening-season loss.

Terry Duerod had 20 points to help Detroit come from behind to beat Harvard. Harvard was ahead the entire first half, leading 40-26 at the buzzer. But Duerod had eight points in four minutes at the beginning of the second half to put the Titans in a tie at 46 with 15 minutes to go. The score changed hands until the final eight minutes when Detroit went ahead to stay.

In the earlier game, Eastern Michigan's Bill Weaver had 16 points to lead the Hurons to victory.

Elsewhere, Joe Calvin scored 21 points as Illinois State defeated Kent State 79-71.

Fittipaldi Signs 2-Year Contract

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Former Formula 1 racing champion Emerson Fittipaldi signed a two-year contract with Copersucar last week, the driver says.

The contract will give the Fittipaldi team about $2 million in the first year.

Copersucar, the giant coffee, sugar and alcohol producing company with headquarters in this Brazilian industrial city, announced in November it would contract Fittipaldi for another year.

Fittipaldi, who recently returned from trial runs in France, next plans to practice in Buenos Aires.

Alfio Righetti Gets 10-Round Decision

RIMINI, Italy (AP) — Italian heavyweight Alfio Righetti scored a 10-round decision over Great Britain's Tony Moore before a hometown crowd Monday.

Righetti staggered Moore in the seventh and eighth rounds and dominated the fight.

Griffin Says Play Defense

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Archie Griffin, the only college football player ever to win the Heisman Trophy twice, had some advice for younger brother Ray.

"Archie said, 'You'll be a real high draft choice if you stay on defense,'" the Ohio State senior remembered.

This dilemma surfaced after the opening game with Miami this fall. Jeff Logan and Ricky Johnson, two top tailbacks, were hurt.

Suddenly, the Buckeyes' offensive runners were scarce. The SOS went out for Ray Griffin, one of the nation's premier safeties, to return to the attacking unit.

After all, it should have been an easy transition. Ray had won All-Ohio prep honors as a tailback and understudied his more famous brother as an Ohio State freshman.

It wasn't.

Griffin, one of seven brothers who play the sport, worked two games at tailback. He carried 21 times for just 74 yards.

"It was a lack of practice on offense for me," he said of the ill-fated switch. "It wasn't for a lack of confidence. It just takes time."

So it was back to safety in the fourth game. He stayed there the rest of the way, but the move, he concedes, hurt his chances to follow in Archie's footsteps as a consensus All-America.

"I agree," said the 5-foot-9, 182-pound Ray, swifter and lighter than Archie.

"But I wanted to make the change as far as the team was concerned. It was a good move for the team. It was not a good move for me personally. At Ohio State, I want to think more of the team."

Ivan Lendl Wins Tennis Tourney

MIAMI (AP) — Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia has claimed the championship in the 18-under boys' division of the Orange Bowl Junior Tennis Tournament with an upset victory over top-seeded Yannick Noah of France.

Lendl, the No. 3 seeded player, came back Monday after dropping the first set 3-6 and won a 7-6 tiebreaker, going on to take the final set 6-3.

In the girls' division, secondseeded Anne Smith of Dallas outlasted No. 1 seed Hana Strachonova 7-6, 7-5.

Carter Family Good In Business Ventures

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — It used to be when folks thought of the Carter family, they thought of peanuts. Not any more.

In the 11 months Jimmy Carter has been president, members of his family have parlayed his position into almost a million-dollar windfall.

The president's kinkfolk have come a long way since that hot summer in Plains, Ga., a year and a half ago when Amy was selling lemonade for a dime and tuna fish sandwiches for a dollar.

Now there are books — one about Carter's mother's Peace Corps days in India, two about faith healing and one in preparation about brother Billy.

And there are personal appearances by Billy Carter — at the World Champion Belly-flop and Cannonball Diving contest in Canada and the World Champion Pole-climbing contest in Kentucky, to name only two.

Billy's agent says he makes four such appearances a month at $5,000 each. That would be $240,000 a year.

The president's younger brother has put his picture and signature on a new beer called "Billy." It was first marketed last fall by the Falls City Brewing Co. of Louisville, Ky., which owns the rights.

Cousin Hugh Carter, who owns a worm farm in Plains, said his business has increased 25 percent since Jimmy Carter went to the White House. He said he sells 15 million worms a year — about $104,250 gross.

The president's sister, Gloria Carter Spann, compiled the letters her mother wrote while she was in the Peace Corps. The book, "Away From Home: Letters to My Family," has sold 35,000 hardback copies, according to Emily Boxer of Simon and Schuster, the publisher.

Plane Lands On Highway

RED OAK, Iowa (AP) — Motorists along U.S. 34 in southwest Iowa were surprised Monday to see a light airplane swoop down and land on the highway about 10 miles east of here.

The Montgomery County sheriff's office said the pilot of the plane was Leo Radar, an airplane mechanic from Arcanum, Ohio. Radar and his wife and 18-month old daughter were flying from Dayton to Spokane, Wash.

They were en route from the Davis County airport in Indiana to Rapid City, S.D., when the craft ran out of gas, authorities said.

One motorist, Fred Loeb of Stanton, saw the plane land near Viking Lake State Park and stopped to help push the craft off the highway.

Some aviation gasoline was brought to the site, the plane was pushed back onto the highway and Radar flew to the Red Oak airport to refuel.

Although the airport was closed for the holiday, Radar got some gas from the Civil Air Patrol and proceeded on his way to South Dakota.

Lung Disease Linked To Smoke, Grain Dust

PHILADELPHIA — People whose jobs expose them to high concentrations of grain dust who also smoke cigarettes may be at high risk of developing chronic obstructive lung disease.

Although it is difficult to separate the effects of smoking from those of inhaling large quantities of grain dust in people who do both, such individuals seem to fare worse than those who do one or the other, James A. Dosman, M.D., F.R.C.P., of the University of Saskatchewan, says in an editorial in the December 1977 issue of Annals of Internal Medicine.

The Annals is the scientific journal of the American College of Physicians, a national professional organization of over 40,000 specialists in internal medicine and related areas.

Chronic obstructive pulmonary disease seems to be the most commonly occurring lung condition in grain workers. Components of grain dust include insect parts, rat hair, mold spores, and pesticides as well as grain particles and antigens that can cause reactions. There are an estimated 500,000 grain workers in the United States and 30,000 in Canada, excluding farmers.

Dr. Dosman recommends that persons who are exposed to cereal dust in their jobs should refrain from smoking on the job, and raises the possibility that such jobs be given to nonsmokers. His conclusion is based on a study of 1,066 grain elevator operators. Dr. Dosman and his associates used an air flow test (called a spirometer) to measure the workers' lung function to detect the presence of chronic obstructive lung disease. Nonsmokers were found to have little evidence of disease, even when exposed to grain dust for a period of many years. However, smokers who were exposed to the dust had poorer lung function than either the non-smoking workers or smokers who were not exposed to the dust.

"The implication ... is that smoking and exposure to grain dust, occurring together in the same person, result in a diminution in lung function that does not appear to occur with either taken separately," Dr. Dosman says.

The mechanisms by which this happens are not clear; cigarette smoking may intensify airway obstruction caused by the dust, or the dust may intensify obstruction caused by smoking. It is also possible that the two irritants work together to produce effects neither could produce alone.

In Dr. Dosman's view, this observation may mean that part of the responsibility for protecting worker health may belong to those workers who smoke.

Dr. Dosman recommends that persons who are exposed to cereal dust in their jobs should refrain from smoking on the job, and raises the possibility that such jobs be given to nonsmokers. His conclusion is based on a study of 1,066 grain elevator operators. Dr. Dosman and his associates used an air flow test (called a spirometer) to measure the workers' lung function to detect the presence of chronic obstructive lung disease. Nonsmokers were found to have little evidence of disease, even when exposed to grain dust for a period of many years. However, smokers who were exposed to the dust had poorer lung function than either the non-smoking workers or smokers who were not exposed to the dust.

"The implication ... is that smoking and exposure to grain dust, occurring together in the same person, result in a diminution in lung function that does not appear to occur with either taken separately," Dr. Dosman says.

The mechanisms by which this happens are not clear; cigarette smoking may intensify airway obstruction caused by the dust, or the dust may intensify obstruction caused by smoking. It is also possible that the two irritants work together to produce effects neither could produce alone.

In Dr. Dosman's view, this observation may mean that part of the responsibility for protecting worker health may belong to those workers who smoke.

PHILADELPHIA — People whose jobs expose them to high concentrations of grain dust who also smoke cigarettes may be at high risk of developing chronic obstructive lung disease.

Although it is difficult to separate the effects of smoking from those of inhaling large quantities of grain dust in people who do both, such individuals seem to fare worse than those who do one or the other, James A. Dosman, M.D., F.R.C.P., of the University of Saskatchewan, says in an editorial in the December 1977 issue of Annals of Internal Medicine.

The Annals is the scientific journal of the American College of Physicians, a national professional organization of over 40,000 specialists in internal medicine and related areas.

Chronic obstructive pulmonary disease seems to be the most commonly occurring lung condition in grain workers. Components of grain dust include insect parts, rat hair, mold spores, and pesticides as well as grain particles and antigens that can cause reactions. There are an estimated 500,000 grain workers in the United States and 30,000 in Canada, excluding farmers.

Dr. Dosman recommends that persons who are exposed to cereal dust in their jobs should refrain from smoking on the job, and raises the possibility that such jobs be given to nonsmokers. His conclusion is based on a study of 1,066 grain elevator operators. Dr. Dosman and his associates used an air flow test (called a spirometer) to measure the workers' lung function to detect the presence of chronic obstructive lung disease. Nonsmokers were found to have little evidence of disease, even when exposed to grain dust for a period of many years. However, smokers who were exposed to the dust had poorer lung function than either the non-smoking workers or smokers who were not exposed to the dust.

"The implication ... is that smoking and exposure to grain dust, occurring together in the same person, result in a diminution in lung function that does not appear to occur with either taken separately," Dr. Dosman says.

The mechanisms by which this happens are not clear; cigarette smoking may intensify airway obstruction caused by the dust, or the dust may intensify obstruction caused by smoking. It is also possible that the two irritants work together to produce effects neither could produce alone.

In Dr. Dosman's view, this observation may mean that part of the responsibility for protecting worker health may belong to those workers who smoke.

Doctors Give Advice On Influenza

PHILADELPHIA — With the influenza season almost upon us, Philip C. Hoffman, M.D. and Richard E. Dixon, M.D. of the Public Health Service Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta recommend that patients with uncomplicated influenza be kept at home and out of hospitals.

However, curtailing hospital visits from people in the community is probably unnecessary even in periods of widespread influenza, unless visitors show actual signs of illness, the CDC physicians say in the December 1977 issue of Annals of Internal Medicine, the scientific publication of the American College of Physicians.

The College is a national professional organization of over 40,000 specialists in internal medicine and allied areas.

Hospitalized patients are much more likely to contract influenza from hospital employees than from visitors, and immunizing employees is a step well worth considering, Drs. Hoffman and Dixon advise.

A drug shown to offer some protection against influenza type 'A' can also be given to employees. It is most useful when given for temporary protection during the time between receiving a flu shot and developing antibodies to the virus, because otherwise susceptibility to influenza increases when the drug is discontinued. Amantadine has been shown to significantly reduce the risk of developing influenza and does not interfere with the body's antibody response to flu vaccine.

Drs. Hoffman and Dixon also say that isolation or grouping of patients who do develop influenza in the hospital should be considered to reduce spread to other patients.

Capt. Smallwood, Sgt. Pontious Attend School

Capt. Jerry Smallwood and Sgt. Larry Pontious of the Circleville Police Department attended a two-week firearms instructors school at the Ohio Peace Officers Training Academy in London this month.

The two officers received new training techniques that will enable them to train local police officers in firearms.

The training allows Smallwood and Pontious to hold a training school and to teach students through the Industrial Commission of Ohio, which gave the two teaching certificates for vocational education.

The session dealt in part with firearms and with instructional techniques.

Smallwood said the old training did not put stress on anybody. "It was just target practice," he said.

The academy firearms instructor, Bill Groce, developed a new technique which deals with being able to shoot fast and accurately.

For example, Smallwood said, "We had to shoot three targets, two shots in each target in four seconds. We had to shoot in total darkness with a flashlight."

"We had to shoot in total darkness with a beacon (red light)," Smallwood said that was the hardest part. "When that beacon moves around, the target moves," he said.

Both local officers qualified as 'expert' shooters.

Law enforcement officers from all over Ohio and a United States Coast Guard officer from Wisconsin attended the school.

Storms Did Not End 2-Year Western Drought

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Three solid storms have dumped rain and snow across thirsty California since Thanksgiving, but the two-year drought may not be over yet, a forecaster says.

A wet weather depression meandering in the eastern Pacific funneled another storm into the state Monday, sending added snow to the Sierra slopes and widespread rains to lower elevations. More of the same was expected today.

Despite the storms, National Weather Service forecaster Ray Williams says: "So far this year precipitation is normal, but we don't know what the rest of the year really is going to do."

Williams noted the water table is still far below what it should be and that water rationing is still the rule in many areas.

Three of the largest reservoirs in California are still at critically low levels, the state Drought Information Center in Sacramento points out.

Shasta Dam, which has a capacity of 4.5 million acre-feet, has only 914,000 acre-feet in storage. Folsom Dam, with a million-acre-foot capacity, has 182,000-acre-feet; Oroville Dam has a third of its 3.5 million-acre-foot capacity.

A fair weather high pressure system had hovered over northern California for two years, diverting storms from the state. But the system has broken up and there is little evidence on

Peace Outlook Not 'Smooth' In Mideast

TEL AVIV (AP) — Prime Minister Menahem Begin's declared success in summitry with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat must be translated into action if Israel and Egypt are to make steady progress toward peace.

The next stage calls for ministerial-level talks on military and political disagreements, and the road ahead looks pretty rocky at the moment.

Gen. Avraham Tamir, Israel's military representative at the recessed Cairo negotiations admits, "We must have many compromises. To tell you everything will be smooth, no, it will not be so."

In the upcoming talks, details of Israel's willingness to withdraw from most of Sinai will be discussed by Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman and Egyptian War Minister Abdel Ghani el Gamasy in Cairo.

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and his Egyptian counterpart, Mohammed Kamel, will have a more difficult task in their political talks, centering on the Palestinian Arab problem.

Sadat described this question as the "core and crux" of the Mideast dispute and reported in the "agreed statement" at the end of the Ismailia summit Monday only that "Egypt and Israel discussed differences."

The Israeli proposal for Palestinian

Arab self-rule plainly was unacceptable to Sadat even though Begin, back home in Israel, said of the idea, "it is a great event in the history of this country and of the Palestinian Arabs."

At the news conference before leaving Ismailia, Begin hinted that Palestinian Arabs may join the political negotiations beginning in about three weeks. In addition, Sadat said he saw a role for the United States and the United Nations in the Jerusalem talks.

Who would represent the Palestinians? This is one of the first questions the foreign ministers will have to handle. Holding their talks in the Israeli capital may indicate some success for Israel's proposal that the Palestinians be represented by people now living under Israeli occupation in the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

If Egypt accepts this idea, it would be a big step away from the general Arab position that the occupied Palestinians don't have enough political freedom to negotiate for themselves.

The complexity of this and other problems leads to a lot of speculation about a separate pact between Israel and Egypt, whose dispute over sandy Sinai is more easily solved than the emotional Palestinian question.

Letters Swamp Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Angry state tax officials are writing President Carter to protest a trade treaty with Great Britain that could deprive states of hundreds of millions of tax dollars from multinational corporations.

At issue is a treaty provision that would prohibit state auditors from considering the costs and profits of foreign subsidiaries in determining a company's taxes.

W.C. Strickland, Georgia state revenue commissioner, said this would allow multinationals to avoid state income tax payments by shifting profits to overseas affiliates.

The treaty, negotiated by the Treasury Department and now pending in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, would apply to British-based multinationals operating in this country. But state officials say that if British firms are granted the tax break, it soon will apply to all multinationals.

Most states now use some form of the so-called "unitary business doctrine," which considers all operations.

But Treasury Department officials say the unitary doctrine is unfair to corporations because most taxing jurisdictions around the world use the "arms length" approach, in which a company reports only the income and costs that the firm considers relevant to its local operations.

State officials argue that many corporations habitually under-report their tax liabilities under the arms-length system.

The unitary method has increased corporate tax liabilities wherever it has been used, indicating significant disagreement between tax officials and corporate officers as to what is taxable at a state level. State officials concede that the current unitary method needs refinement.

But "any valid disagreement between the states and the multinationals must be resolved with compromise from both sides, not a total federal cave-in to the desires of the multinationals," Strickland argued in a letter to Carter signed by officials from 12 states.

The state officials are not the only ones lobbying on the issue. The multinationals are working for approval of the treaty and have mounted a campaign in California to repeal the unitary approach there.

In his letter, Strickland told the president that, "There is a movement afoot in your administration which will effectively tie the states' hands in coping with taxation of multinational corporations."

"This proposal is inconsistent with your administration's stated goals for tax reform, especially when major beneficiaries would be multinational oil companies."

California, Oregon and Alaska rely heavily on the unitary approach, and the Western Governors' Conference says the treaty would cost these three states an estimated $150 million a year.

Strickland's letter carried signatures from tax or revenue officers from Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Maryland, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah and Vermont.

Additional letters to Carter were sent by officials from California, Minnesota, Washington and West Virginia, and from the governors of New Hampshire and South Dakota.

U.S. Feels Russian Missile Could Hit Here

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of uncertainty, U.S. officials now believe that Russia has started deploying a new mobile land-based missile with potential to hit the United States.

In its present form, the Soviet SS-20 missile's estimated 3,000-mile range limits it to targets in Western Europe, China and the Middle East.

But U.S. specialists say its range can be extended easily to 5,500 nautical miles by adding a third rocket stage to the present two stages.

That would make it similar to the SS-16 intercontinental ballistic missile and put the United States within its range.

U.S. military officials are concerned the conversion could tip the nuclear balance against the United States quickly in a time of diplomatic crisis, especially since mobile missile bases would be hard to find and knock out.

Pentagon officials warned earlier about the potential for conversion of the SS-20, but noted then that the missile had not been deployed.

The months of uncertainty and conflicting reports on deployment apparently stemmed from difficulty in locating and identifying the SS-20's movable launch equipment at combat-ready positions inside the Soviet Union.

However, U.S. military intelligence analysts now say the SS-20 is deployed in eastern Russia.

That suggests the first combat-ready SS-20s, which can carry three nuclear warheads each, are aimed at targets in China, with which Russia has been feuding for years.

Intelligence analysts also believe preparations are under way to deploy mobile missiles in western and central Russia. From western Russia, SS-20s could blanket Western Europe. From central Russia, the missiles could strike targets in the Middle East.

With their 3,000-mile range, the SS-20s are unlikely to be subject to limitations on strategic nuclear weapons now being negotiated by Soviet and U.S. diplomats.

That is because, although they could be converted to long range missiles, SS-20s as now deployed do not have long enough range to strike the United States from Russian soil.

Also, the Russians have shown no interest in President Carter's bid for a mutual ban on mobile strategic missiles.

The United States is developing a possible huge new intercontinental range missile which could be deployed in underground movable launch pads, but the Carter administration has delayed full-scale development work.

Therapy Showing Success With Housewife In Coma

TOKYO (AP) — Harriet Rosenberg, a 34-year-old mother of two from East Monroe, N.Y., who has been in a coma for almost a year, shows "small, first signs" she might regain consciousness through a new blood circulating therapy started last week, her husband said today.

"Doctors told me there have been small improvements. First, her finger muscles softened. Now you can bend her fingers which we couldn't do before," Ted Rosenberg, 38, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

Doctors also told him his wife now blinks her left and right eyelids to an equal degree and that she can swallow saliva, although unconsciously, Rosenberg said. She could do neither before the therapy, he added.

"Doctors said the blood-circulating therapy is a step-by-step procedure, especially to a patient of her age. And I don't expect an overnight miracle. But let me say doctors and I are cautiously optimistic," Rosenberg said.

Mrs. Rosenberg underwent the first of a series of "autogenous blood pumping therapy" sessions at the Iwate Medical College in northern Japan on Dec. 22. The treatment calls for pumping 20 cubic centimeters of patient's blood into an aspirator — a partial vacuum chamber — where a chemical is added and the blood then pumped back into the artery.

The 20-cc pumping process is repeated 30 to 40 times in a single treatment and repeated after two-week intervals. The chemical is added to dilate the constricted arteries suffered by persons in a coma. The resulting dilation of the arteries helps the patient to receive an adequate flow of blood throughout the body, including the brain.

The treatment has been effective more than 50 percent of the time, including the case of an 11-year-old girl, Sachiko Iwadata, who regained consciousness after a three-year coma and now is back in school, Dr. Haruyuki Kanaya of the college reported earlier.

Mrs. Rosenberg suffered brain damage in an automobile collision in January while she was taking her 5-year-old son, Barry, to nursery school. She has been in a coma ever since, although she started to blink her eyelids in March, Rosenberg said.

After about one month of observation, the second series of treatment for Mrs. Rosenberg will start on Jan. 26.

Strangler Case Hampered

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Investigators of the Hillside Strangler case have been hampered by dead-end clues, a lack of tips, and false confessions. But perhaps most frustrating of all has been dissension among law enforcement agencies drawn together by the dumping of murdered females across the northern suburbs.

The latest disagreement centers on whether one of two young women found slain over the weekend is the strangler's latest victim. But disputes in the case began soon after it was noted in mid-November that the bodies of young girls and women were beginning to turn up with unusual frequency in the Los Angeles area.

Investigators from the agencies then involved — the sheriff's office and Los Angeles and Glendale police — met but could not agree on which victims were connected. They continued to handle the cases separately, although a tentative liaison was set up.

On Nov. 25, Sheriff's Lt. Phil Bollington dropped two names from a list of 11 possible victims of the strangler. He said no definite connection could be established between the nine other slayings and the deaths of 7-year-old Margaret Elizabeth Madrid, found Nov. 6 in the city of Industry, and 19-year-old Theresa Berry of Pomona, found Nov. 4 in Walnut.

But Los Angeles police Cmdr. William Booth declined the same day to rule out any of the 11 victims as targets of the same killer or to pinpoint any as connected.

"Because of the dissimilarities in the case, the ages and backgrounds, there is a strong possibility that a number of the cases are not connected in any way," he said.

However, when the strangler task force was formed shortly thereafter and put out its official list, Miss Berry and the Madrid girl were ruled out. At least two more victims have turned up since.

Differences were also apparent in other areas.

Election Commission Suit Called 'Harassment Tactic'

WASHINGTON — National Right to Work Committee President Reed Larson said today the Federal Election Commission (FEC) suit alleging the Committee has violated federal election laws is a "harassment tactic" intended to cripple the Committee's political arm, and deprive the Committee's 1.4 million members of their constitutional rights to contribute to political causes in which they believe.

Larson said the suit was a form of retaliation against the Committee for its two successful court actions forcing the FEC to act on its complaints that the National Education Association union and the AFL-CIO illegally used compulsory union dues and fees to support political candidates.

He said the suit shows a double standard by the FEC in dealing with the National Right to Work Committee and organized labor.

In January, 1976, in accordance with FEC regulations, the Committee asked the Commission for an advisory opinion on the operations of its political arm, Employee Rights Campaign Committee (ERCC), and its communications with its members.

Finally, frustrated by more than a year and a half of FEC in federal court, charging the biased agency failed to respond in a reasonable time as required by law. Even so, the FEC still hasn't rendered the advisory opinion, or acted on the question of member communications.

"The FEC, in this unnecessary suit, by continuing to conceal its definition of member, is preventing us from communicating with our political action committee members," Larson said. "We're denied the right to take a part in the political process because of the FEC's intransigence."

"In contrast, the FEC acted quickly in bending the rules for the AFL-CIO. When the FEC began writing its own rules and regulations, one of the first was to expressly allow the AFL-CIO to solicit political donations from employees belonging to various international unions, even though those employees are not members of the AFL-CIO according to its own charter."

"That shows the political muscle the AFL-CIO has with the FEC."

Larson also pointed out other evidence from the suit of FEC harassment.

In the suit it was forced to file against the AFL-CIO last week, the FEC asked only for a fine of $10,000 against the federation and its political arm COPE, for illegally transferring in excess of $392,000 from its general fund treasury to COPE for campaign expenditures.

However, against the Right to Work Committee and its political action arm, the vindictive FEC is seeking fines of $100,000, plus 200 percent of $76,474.87 allegedly used for campaign expenditures, and return of the funds.

"This outrageous suit against the Right to Work Committee provides a glimpse of what's to come to any citizen or group who dares to oppose compulsory unionism," Larson said. "This is a harassment tactic intended to help Big Labor officials cripple and eventually wipe out the Right to Work in America."

"It is not just a coincidence the suit comes a few days after the Committee struck the AFL-CIO with a suit for using compulsory dues and fees for politics."

Larson pointed to the appointment of Thomas E. Harris as chairman of the FEC as indicative of the Commission's pro-Big Labor bias. Harris was a chief aide and lobbyist to Meany and other union officials for 30 years, and fought Right to Work laws across the country. Two other proposed Carter nominees to the Commission also have strong organized labor support—Sam Zagoria, an apologist for compulsory unionism, and John W. McGarry, a congressman aide with strong Big Labor ties.

"This suit has a chilling effect on several constitutional issues," Larson said. "Our right to petition for due process, our right to participate in the political process, our right to communicate with our supporters, our freedom of association, and our freedom of speech."

Strangler . . .

Los Angeles police said they would not comment on the sketch and have not released any drawings of their own.

Tension between the Glendale and Los Angeles departments rose sharply when Glendale Police Chief Duane Baker made an offhand remark at a civic meeting that some of the victims had been sodomized.

Details of the sexual attacks on the victims who were molested had been a closely guarded secret. Police had wanted certain information kept secret so it could be used in polygraph tests of suspects.

Another such detail was how the victims were strangled. Police had refused to say, but the county coroner's chief investigator, Bob Danbacher, disclosed Nov. 23: "No necks were broken. There's no other marks on their bodies to indicate they were beaten."

Elected officials entered the case when it was charged that Los Angeles police refused to answer a call about a prostitute who failed to check in when she went to meet a client Dec. 14. The woman was Kimberly Diane Martin, apparently the strangler's 11th victim.

Markets

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, pausing after its rally in the three sessions before the Christmas holiday.

Gainers held a 5-4 lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

But the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped .52 to 829.35 in the first half hour.

Analysts said investors were expecting some adverse news Tuesday when the government reports on the U.S. balance of trade for November.

A large trade deficit of late has been cited as a primary reason for pressure on the dollar in foreign-exchange markets.

Warner-Lambert, the early volume leader among NYSE issues, rose 1/2 to 26 1/2.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 8.06 to 829.87, to finish the week with a 14.55 gain.

Advances outnumbered declines by better than a 2-1 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 20.08 million shares against 28.10 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose .45 to 52.26.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .68 at 126.28.

Christmas Hijacker Charged

ATLANTA (AP) — A man held for the Christmas Day hijacking of an Eastern Airlines jet faced air piracy charges before a U.S. magistrate today.

Nikolai Wischnewsky, 32, of Pearl River, N.Y., allegedly commandeered the DC-9 about 50 miles from Atlanta on Sunday using a toy pistol and a portable radio taped to resemble a bomb.

The Austrian-born landscaper was being held without bond in the Fulton County jail.

Wischnewsky boarded the Miami-Indianapolis flight in Jacksonville, Fla., FBI agents said.

Agents said the hijacker passed a flight attendant a note demanding that the plane fly to Cuba.

Women and children were allowed to leave when the aircraft landed in Atlanta at 8:20 a.m. and the FBI then persuaded the hijacker to release the rest of the 32 passengers and four crew members. Agents overpowered him a few hours later.

There were no injuries.

Police Search For Blond 5-Year-Old

ALEXANDRIA, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky State Police Detective Phil Harney said authorities continue to receive leads on a yellow van in the investigation of 5-year-old Keith Holliday's disappearance.

Keith, son of Michael and Judy Holliday, disappeared Wednesday morning. A two-day search involving more than 1,000 persons turned up no trace of the blond-haired boy, police said.

State Detective Jerry Keith said police were not certain whether the van had any connection with the disappearance. But Keith said investigators still wanted to talk to the driver.

Police described the van as yellow with spots of primer paint where rust repairs had possibly been made. Police said a witness described the van, seen in the vicinity Wednesday, as looking like a former "bread truck."

Thousands participated in mass searches of the area but no trace of the boy has been found. Kentucky State Police have not ruled out the possibility that the child may have been abducted.

The formal search of the area around the Holliday home was called off Friday but hundreds of persons continued searching through the Christmas holiday weekend.

A Page Of Opinion

Mush No More

Even in an age of heavy mechanization, it seems unlikely a machine could be found which can compete with an animal capable of hauling many times his own weight, travel a hundred miles a day at an 8-10 mph clip, and require only a pound of dog food for sustenance.

All of this he would do under the most severe climatic conditions. Yet, the Alaskan husky today is obsolete. With the exception of a few isolated outposts where the Eskimos are too poor to afford anything else, the husky has been replaced by the gasoline-powered snowmobile.

Most of the huskies which still survive in the North country are bred to show tourists what one of North America's most famous work animals looked like. But the cry of "mush, you husky," is heard no more.

The Silent Killer

By PHYLLIS BATTELLE

NEW YORK — Hypertension is known as the "silent killer" because it usually produces no symptoms - even though it is the single leading cause for disability and death in the U.S.

"Sometimes, the first sign of hypertension is a heart attack or stroke," says Dr. John Laragh, founder of the country's first hypertension center.

A major problem is that the term "hypertension" is misunderstood.

"In everybody's mind, hypertension implies an emotional or psychological state. It is thought of as an affliction of nervous, pressured, tense people. This is largely untrue.

"A lot of calm, easygoing people, who feel good and are under no particular stress, have high blood pressure. Hypertension is purely a physical state. Blood is rushing around our systems under great pressure, and in some unsuspecting people there is so much pressure that the blood vessels break."

If an artery feeding the brain should burst, the brain is robbed abruptly of its blood supply and oxygen; the damage is called a stroke. High blood pressure, in addition, forces the heart to work harder, may cause it to enlarge and demand more oxygen than the circulatory system can provide. The results of untreated high blood pressure are sudden, often fatal; and in the majority of the cases, the victims are unaware that they were in any danger.

"That's why it's called the silent killer," says Laragh. "They feel fine, until the dam breaks."

Laragh (Lair'-uh) won the coveted Stouffer Prize in 1969 for his research into high blood pressure. His studies revealed the role of hormone action in cases of hypertension. This led to his development of "hormonal profiling" - a computer-aided analysis of the patient's hormonal output - which enables doctors to differentiate among patients with so-called essential hypertension. Named the "renin profile" (for renin, a kidney hormone which is produced in response to a drop in blood pressure), the procedure "tells us what kind of a specific blood pressure problem exists," says Laragh.

"Hypertensive patients with low renin are less in danger of developing heart attacks or strokes. Those with high renin levels can be helped with medicines that will slow or even stop production of the hormone. Until we figured out just what renin did," Laragh explains, "we conducted therapy on a hit-or-miss basis - try a drug, and if it didn't work, switch to another one. Now we can tell in advance what to try."

The renin profile test is now available at a large number of commercial laboratories and hospitals around the country. It is a breakthrough in understanding the silent killer; for, in spite of the fact that hypertension is the single leading cause of death in the U.S., doctors still are not sure what causes it. Several factors are believed to be involved, ranging from obesity and diet, to stress and heredity. It strikes across the board, crossing lines of sex and age (even infants can have high blood pressure, though this is rare) and race (for reasons as yet unknown, blacks are more prone to hypertension than whites. One out of every four adult black Americans has high blood pressure compared to one out of seven whites).

Laragh, 52, founded the country's first hypertension center in 1971, at Manhattan's Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center. In 1975, he transferred his research, testing and treatment techniques to The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

There, he tests thousands of patients for hypertension, and urges people to have their blood pressure checked regularly.

"The real solution to heart attack and stroke as the nation's number one health problem is prevention," he says. "And we can cure the problem, once we know it exists.

"We now have a host of drugs - 15 or 20 types - to take care of high blood pressure. They can be customized to individual patients, with individual hypertensive diseases." Though many of the reasons for escalating blood pressure are not known, specialists like Laragh realize that cases differ, and so does treatment: "In this business, what's good for the goose is not necessarily good for the gander." But most, if discovered early, can be kept under control.

So go in and have your pressure checked often: "It's a lifetime guarantee . . ."

Business World

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) - Americans really went on a spending binge in the final weeks of the year, and there are indications that a good percentage of the purchases didn't end up under the Christmas tree.

They were consumed instead, literally swallowed, in the form of food and drink. Or so it would seem.

Final figures won't be available for a couple of more weeks, but we do know this: Food store sales in November rose 2.9 percent over those of October, suggesting an amazing increase in intake.

True, some of these purchases might have made gifts, but another set of statistics suggest otherwise. November sales at eating and drinking places leaped 2.1 percent after having been weak in October.

Economists are now studying such statistics to find out what they can about the behavior of the sometimes unpredictable consumer. They have already drawn some conclusions:

—The public was in more of a buying mood than was generally foreseen. The buying began unusually early; October retail sales leaped 2.7 percent over September, and November added another 1.5 over October.

—Early reports of a 1.5 percent increase in the dollar value of automotive purchases for November are suspect.

"There is a possibility that revisions will trim the November auto component of retail sales," Citibank comments. For one thing, it questions that unit sales would be down but dollar sales up so much.

—Shoppers apparently were not reluctant to use credit. That, at least, was the trend that seemed to be setting in early in the final quarter of the year.

Contrary to what some people might expect, consumers assume credit burdens when they feel confident — not when the absence of ready cash leaves them on other choice.

Personal incomes were up; people were confident; they took on credit.

This burst of consumer activity now presents analysts with the question of how much longer it might continue. Some credit critics say the burden of repayments could hamper sales in 1978.

Another school of thought, however, observe that consumers are still able to repay their borrowings on time. They feel that 1978 sales might indeed be affected by activity this year, but merely because consumers have already purchased many of the items they need.

Whatever, the indomitable consumer has again surprised some of those who claim the tilt of expert, and has almost made certain a continuation of the expansion into a fourth year.

He might have done it with food and drink and a lot of gifts that the recipient is inclined to return, but that's the way the economy turns.

A low pressure system moved into Ohio overnight, leaving a light dusting of snow over most of the state.

A southwest flow of air combined with clouds ahead of the system to hold temperatures to milder levels than had been expected. Overnight lows were generally in the teens.

Snowfall amounts were less than one-half inch.

The low pressure trough will move out of the state by noon.

Snow flurries will persist in the east through this afternoon and possibly along the east shore of Lake Erie through evening. Accumulation will generally be less than one inch, but the northeast snow belt could get 2-3 inches.

Afternoon temperatures should be between 15 and 20 today. Clearing skies and light winds will allow temperatures to drop to between zero and 10 above tonight.

Milder air will spread into Ohio Wednesday, with afternoon readings in the low to mid 20s.

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

My husband seems to fall apart with any pain or ache. He just doesn't seem able to handle any kind of pain. Generally speaking, don't you think women are able to take pain better than men?

Mrs. E. F., III.

Dear Mrs. F.: I don't know of any in-depth studies that have revealed women's ability to tolerate pain as compared with men.

My personal experience, however, is that women do, indeed, handle pain better and continue to function with pain more readily than men.

There are many variables that determine the capacity to tolerate pain. This is known as the "threshold" for pain. Even those with a high tolerance for pain may, under certain circumstances, find that this is lowered. When there is additional emotional stress, even those who can accept a great deal of pain may find that their tolerance is lowered and that they react more severely than usual.

The capacity to withstand pain is not a comparative game. Children and adults should not be stigmatized when they react more actively than is commonly expected.

Some people cannot tolerate the slightest pain associated with drilling of the teeth. Others can sit through the most exhaustive sessions in the dentist's office, without a complaint.

Stoicism and the tolerance for pain can be acquired. I have found that when patients are armed with the truth, when their fears are allayed and when their anxiety level is reduced their threshold for pain improves.

Patient understanding, rather than condemnation, is in order if physical and emotional pain are to be made more tolerable.

I have a hooked nose. My problem is that I can't breathe well through it unless I raise the tip. Is it possible to have this fixed? I'm 27.

Mr. B.O.T., Mass.

Dear Mr. O.T.:

You describe so well a condition known as the "hanging tip syndrome." Many people, even those without a hooked nose, find that by elevating the tip they can breathe more easily.

Sometimes, a deviation of the septum is present and interferes with the free flow of air to the nose. The septum is the cartilage that divides one side of the nose from the other.

The "hanging tip" can be easily repaired. Very often people elect to have cosmetic plastic surgery done at the same time, especially if there is a marked deformity of the nose. In this way, the appearance and the ability to breathe are both improved.

Primrose Magoo

By JIM BISHOP

The bellman recognized him. So did most people in the lobby of the Beverly Hilton. He lifted the cigar from his face and smiled at the room clerk. He looked like Jack Paar. He was as nervous as Jack Parr. He was Jack Parr. He signed the register "Mr. Primrose Magoo."

The clerk spun the register. "Yessir, Mr. Magoo," he said. He punched a bell. "Take Mr. Magoo to his suite." Paar leaned across the desk. He became confidential. "I'm tired of the phone ringing all the time," he whispered. "Phones, favors, autographs — you know." The clerk nodded.

In the elevator, the star and bellman kept their eyes on the numbered floors overhead. Paar followed the man and the luggage. He examined the rooms. Excellent. Early Darryl Zanuck. A clear view of an oil well. The blinds were raised, the air conditioning hummed, the television set was tested for color.

The palm was up. Paar dropped a tip on it. The star picked up a phone. "In case anybody calls me," he said, "I'm Primrose Magoo." The operator sounded puzzled. "Of course, Mr. Magoo," she said. Paar whispered: "What I mean is, I'm not Jack Paar."

The operator was worried. "Why should anyone who wants Mr. Magoo ask for Jack Paar?" she said. He phoned NBC in New York. "Mitzi," he said, "I'm at the Beverly Hilton in Los Angeles. If you want me for anything, just ask for Primrose Magoo. What? Primrose Magoo, dammit. You don't have to spell it, dear. I'll pick up the phone. Anything new . . .?"

Mr. Paar, at his finest, is as nervous as Miss America with a pimple. As sensitive as a bride who finds she's alone at the altar. He faints at unexpected telegrams. Now, in his privacy, he wanted to call Mrs. Paar, but forgot his home phone number.

It was unlisted. At that time, he was unlisted in Bronxville, although since he has been unlisted in Key Biscayne and Connecticut. Information refused to give him the number. He called a few members of his cast instead. "I'm here under the name of Primrose Magoo," he said, in the manner of a spy telling a secret secret. "What? I wish you were that funny on the program, pal."

He had his privacy. Nobody called. Everything was silent. He reveled in it for 10 full minutes. "This," he told himself, "is great. Simply great." On a closet shelf he found a Bible. It was inscribed by someone who forged the signature of Cecil B. DeMille.

Paar investigated the bathroom. He tried the faucets. The hot water emitted hot water. The cold gushed cold. He decided he could no longer endure this magnificent loneliness without the voice of Miriam Paar. He called again.

How ridiculous not to remember one's home number. He looked out the window. The oil well was still rocking like a dirty cradle. "Honey," he said into the phone, "get me information in Bronxville, New York." He spun the cigar slowly in his mouth.

"Hello. Bronxville? Good. This is Jack Paar. I'm in California and I feel embarrassed, but I have to admit I forgot my home phone number. Now what I'd like you to do — What? You must be kidding.

"Come on, dear. I know it's unlisted and you know it's unlisted. But it's my number, honey. Wait a minute. Just a minute. Have you ever listened to the Jack Paar program? A million times? Good. Recognize the voice? I . . . am . . . Jack Paar. Right. That makes everything simple.

"What do you mean — you can't? Now look here, Miss. I happens to be my phone and I pay the bills and I want the number. Why don't you buzz Mrs. Paar and ask her if she would like to speak to her lawfully wedded husband? What do you mean, supervisor? Who's that?

"This is too much. Tell you what you do. Now don't hang up. I know that rules are rules. I can even tell you what the number was before we changed it. You're not interested? If I remembered the new number would I be on my knees begging?

"All right. Okay. Your supervisor says that you must make sure that this is really, truly Jack Paar speaking to you from out in California. Now we're talking. Now we're on the same wavelength. Now we're getting somewhere, honey.

"All you have to do to check it is to call me at the Beverly Hilton Hotel in Los Angeles. Got that? Just call right back. Call collect. Then you'll be sure."

"What, dear? Oh no. Just ask for Primrose Magoo."

Government Has 2 Guidelines On Payment For Abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government employees relying on federal money for abortions are judged by a different standard than poor women who need help for the same treatment.

Congress approved restrictions earlier this month on when Medicaid funds can be used for abortions. They call for federal payments only when a woman might die because of a pregnancy or when two physicians certify that she would suffer serious, long-lasting physical damage because of a pregnancy.

Memberships Due For Farm Bureau

Pickaway County Farm Bureau President Bill Walker, urges all Farm Bureau Members to complete and return their 1978 membership dues notices since insurance coverage and other benefits end December 31.

He said the county Farm Bureau has begun its 1978 membership drive with the mailing of dues notices to all Pickaway Farm Bureau members. Walker is hoping for a return of 90 percent — enough to give membership workers a good start when they conduct their intensive, six day drive on Jan. 12.

In 1978 the organization goal will be 645 members and will make the six consecutive year of growth.

"Farmers and rural residents need Farm Bureau more than ever," said President, Bill Walker. "Farmers in Ohio are suffering from depressed grain prices and the Ohio Farm Bureau is working hard to help correct this situation and it needs total support from all farmers."

Rape or incest victims who promptly report the incidents to authorities also are covered for abortion payments.

But Medicaid is not the only way that government money pays for the procedure.

Members of Congress themselves are among the 2.8 million active federal employees who can receive indirect federal assistance through subsidized insurance plans should they or their family members choose abortions.

In addition, 10 million active or retired civil servants and their dependents are covered through federally funded insurance programs, on which the government spent $1.3 billion this year.

The General Accounting Office has ruled that federal employee health programs are not affected by the restrictions.

Another 7.5 million military personnel worldwide are covered through an extensive health care system, including military hospitals or federal subsidies for private health care.

The Defense Department says military hospitals performed 12,687 abortions between Sept. 1, 1975, and Aug. 31, 1976, while 13,090 abortions were given to military personnel or their dependents in the same period through a private health care system.

The government also underwrites countless other abortions indirectly through subsidies to hospitals. The federal government spent $21.4 billion for subsidies to the 7,000 hospitals in the United States in fiscal year 1976.

And taxpayers who choose to have abortions can write them off as medical expenses on their income tax returns, just as they can any other medical expense.

Both supporters and opponents of federal payments for poor women's abortions say the distinction is unfair. Abortion supporters say poor women are discriminated against, while opponents say abortion shouldn't be paid for with federal money at all.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - Seventeen senior citizen centers throughout the state will be repaired or renovated with a $402,874 expenditure of federal funds approved by the Ohio Commission on Aging.

A total of $908,000 was allocated to the commission for such projects for fiscal year 1977, with $25,970 left to be spent.

Commission members are expected to approve allocation of the remaining funds at its next regular meeting Jan. 18, 1978.

62-Year-Old Woman Sits Out Fine

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) - Anne Semenoff says the Pima County Jail, where she is spending two days for refusing to pay a $23 traffic fine, isn't so bad.

"This isn't such a bad place," she said Thursday. "It's clean and interesting. I had a very good bologna sandwich for lunch, and these jailers do seem to bend over backwards to be nice."

Mrs. Semenoff, 62, was cited for making an improper left turn, but says she did not cross a solid line as an officer claimed and should have been given a warning, not a citation. Her son says she refused his help when he offered to pay the fine.

Dear Abby:

By Abigail VanBuren

Time To Start Up When So Far Down

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for six years to a man who has some kind of hold on me and I can't shake it. I loved him once, but all my love for him is gone now. I've left him 11 times but he always begs me to come back and says if I don't he'll commit suicide, so I go back to him. We have two kids who are practically being raised by my mother because my husband refuses to work steady. He has a bad drinking problem, too. I can't count the places we've been kicked out of because we couldn't pay rent; we can't get credit anyplace.

When he met me I was really no good. I was a 16-year-old prostitute with a drug habit. He keeps reminding me that he took me out of the gutter so I owe him my life.

Can you help me?

TRAPPED

DEAR TRAPPED: No. But you can help yourself. You need counseling, and so does your husband. There are mental health clinics in your area that offers excellent help, and it's free for those without funds. If your husband refuses to go, go without him. Don't let your past dictate your future. You need a better self-image, and the fact that you wrote to me indicates that you're looking for answers, which is half the battle. Get going and good luck.

DEAR ABBY: Why is the bride expected to write all the thank-you notes for the wedding gifts?

Most of the gifts are for the home—to be shared by the couple. So assuming the husband isn't illiterate, why shouldn't he write half the notes?

JUST ASKING

DEAR JUST: Nowhere is it written that the bride should write all the thank-you notes for the wedding gifts. Acknowledging wedding gifts should

MR. McFERREN

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Constantine of Alexandria Bay, New York are announcing the engagement of their daughter Sharon to Mr. William McFerren, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Leighton E. McFerren, 439 Watt St.

Miss Constantine is a graduate of North Quincy High School and received an associate of arts degree from Eastern Nazarene College, Quincy, Mass.

Mr. McFerren is a graduate of Circleville High School.

Both are students of Mid-America Nazarene College, Olathe, Kansas, where Miss Constantine is a junior majoring in religious education and Mr. McFerren is a speech communication senior. Mr. McFerren is also studying broadcasting journalism at the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kansas.

DEAR ABBY: I recently went to the hospital for some exploratory surgery as I was concerned about the possibility of cancer. Two neighbor women, whom I do not know very well, came to visit me there. They took turns asking prying questions as to the nature of my illness, whether more surgery would be necessary, etc. I tried to fend off these questions as best I could.

After they left, a member of a fraternal group to which I belong called me. The same line of questioning was pursued. Only this person spent nearly an hour telling me about "similar cases" in which all the patients died—of cancer. I was depressed beyond words. Why do people visit the sick and leave them sicker?

DEPRESSED

DEAR DEPRESSED: Because common sense is so uncommon. My advice on bedside manner: Make your visit short, sweet and cheerful. Leave the coughs and the kids at home. Ask no questions. If you can't do that, stay away.

Federal Aid Shifts To New England Area

WASHINGTON (AP) — The regional allocation of federal aid has shifted in favor of the New England states in response to local economic needs, a federal study concludes.

A key reason for the recent boost in per capita federal aid to the Northeast is the region's large welfare rolls and high unemployment, the study says.

The General Accounting Office, in a report released on Thursday, said the flow of federal money from 1969 to 1975 showed that regional disparities lessened during that period.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Minimum wage in Ohio will increase 20 cents an hour on Jan. 1 to $2.30 an hour. At the same time, the federal minimum wage will increase from $2.30 to $2.65.

Jack Klein, legal adviser for the Department of Industrial Relations, explained the difference:

"The Ohio General Assembly voted in 1976 to graduate the state minimum wage, which was then at $1.60 an hour, up to the federal wage level of $2.30," Klein said. "A grace period of 16 months was set during which higher wage rates were to be enforced every six months."

"Back in 1976, the Ohio Legislature was not anticipating a further increase as mandated by the federal government just recently," Klein said. "Until the Ohio Legislature moves to increase the wage rate once again, the state minimum wage will remain at $2.30."

"The Northeast, while its population grew most gradually and its unemployment rate rose to highest in the nation, began to receive a greater percentage of federal aid than it paid in federal taxes," said the agency.

"Those regions in a relative economic decline are gaining relatively in federal aid," the GAO said. "Thus, the complex formulas and other factors that determine the flow of aid do seem responsive to changing conditions."

The GAO said simply, "The federal system is a method of redistributing income," and the Treasury Department explained, "The goal of federal policies should not be to return funds to each state in proportion to its tax contribution, but rather to insure that expenditures are made in response to need for these expenditures."

Officials in the industrial states cite deteriorating economic conditions to argue for a "winners" share of the federal pie. They say they need more federal money — just as southern and Appalachian states depended heavily on Washington during temporary periods of economic hardship.

The GAO study included a list of winners and losers revealing which states contribute more money — per resident — in personal income tax revenues to Washington than is returned in federal aid.

The GAO cautioned, "Some states are more in need of aid than others, and naturally these may not be the states with the highest income levels, and therefore the highest tax receipts."

The big losers, in unqualified terms of dollars and cents, are the high-income industrial states of Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, New Jersey and Ohio, along with Florida.

sylvania, Texas, Virginia, Washington and Wisconsin.

The big winners included most growing states: the entire Southeast except Florida, most of the Rocky Mountain states — Montana, Wyoming, Idaho and Utah — and Alaska, Arkansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, New Mexico, New York, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Vermont and West Virginia.

Buying Power Will Be Expanded

COLUMBUS, Ohio AP) — The buying power of most low income Ohio families which use food stamps will be expanded Jan. 1, the Department of Public Welfare said Friday.

A semiannual adjustment by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to reflect changes in food prices will increase the amount of food stamps families may buy.

Under the new rules, a family of four will be able to buy stamps worth $174 each month compared to $170 worth of stamps they could buy since the last adjustment six months ago. One person households will continue to purchase $52 in food stamps.

The income ceiling for a family of four will increase from $567 to $580 a month.

About 250,000 Ohio families now receive stamps, according to Tom McDowell, chief of the bureau of food stamps in the Ohio Department of public welfare.

Defense Budget Will Hit Record $126 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's defense budget proposal for next year will hit a record $126 billion, but sharply cut the Navy's costly ship-building plans.

Pentagon sources said the fiscal 1979 total approved by Carter is about $9.3 billion more than Congress authorized for the current 1978 fiscal year, but $9.4 billion below what the Ford administration had projected for the coming year.

Inflation will account for much of the increase, defense sources said, but the budget will still provide for about 2 percent in what specialists call "real growth" in military assets.

In line with the administration's emphasis on strengthening U.S. conventional forces assigned to Western Europe, the new budget is said to significantly increase funds for the Army to build war reserve stocks of weapons and ammunition and to beef up the anti-tank and artillery power of forces there.

Carter's decision on the budget followed meetings late last week with Defense Secretary Harold Brown and officials of the White House Office of Management and Budget.

The president roughly split the difference between the somewhat more than $127 billion recommended by Brown for the year and the $125 billion which OMB had sought as a ceiling.

During his election campaign, Carter promised a defense spending cut of $5 billion to $7 billion. Defense officials contend that, although he will propose a record high budget, Carter is meeting his commitment by slicing substantially below what Ford had publicly projected for fiscal 1979.

The Navy appears to have taken the most severe lumps. Its plans to build new warships and support vessels were trimmed about 20 percent —

Delayed were a nuclear powered attack submarine; a nuclear powered cruiser, which was to be the first of a new class to carry the Aegis air defense missile system; a frigate, and a support ship.

A Navy officials contend that this ultimately will mean higher costs because the ships are likely to be included in future budgets.

Army and Air Force officials expressed general satisfaction with the outcome of the budget-shaping process, although the Army appeared to come out better than the Air Force.

Natural Gas Pricing Deadlock May Scuttle Carter's Energy Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The natural gas pricing deadlock which stalled congressional action this year on President Carter's energy program may scuttle his chances of getting a comprehensive energy bill next year.

A number of key congressmen say they doubt whether the natural gas stalemate can ever be broken, at least with the current makeup of Congress, and suggest the dispute may simply be dropped.

Josephine Strian Gets Plumber's License

Josephine Striano, 26, is the city's 1,248th licensed master plumber.

Actress Jane Withers for years has played the part of a plumber named Josephine in a household cleanser advertisement.

"When I was a little girl, I was a tomboy one day, fixing a leaky pipe, and a typical girl the next day, playing house with my girl friends," said Mrs. Striano, whose three older brothers are plumbers.

She earned her license by working for seven years with her father, George Figliola, who has been a plumber for 31 years. She also passed written and practical tests allowing her to perform work that the city's building code restricts to licensed plumbers.

Mrs. Striano has been married for three months to a court officer.

City Hall To Receive 'Fresh Air'

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — Youngstown Mayor Jack C. Hunter says he's leaving office after an unprecedented four consecutive terms in order to ventilate city hall a bit.

"I just have always thought that government needs a breath of fresh air from time to time," said the Republican mayor of this predominantly Democratic steel town. "No man can be so good that he should stay in office forever."

Hunter announced he wouldn't run for re-election earlier this year, and because of his past success, his name has been mentioned as a future candidate for the U.S. House of Representatives.

"I have had several job offers in the private sector," said the former bank executive. "The one I take will depend on whether I intend to stay in politics or to return to a fulltime professional career." Hunter said he hasn't made up his mind yet.

Nonetheless, there's a trace of regret in leaving city hall. "You realize, I have been the chief executive officer of a major, multi-million dollar corporation," he said, referring to the city. "Nothing in my life might ever be that big again."

He said his biggest achievements have been the new downtown shopping mall, improved city waste collections, better services for the elderly and creation of a public authority to take over mass transportation.

First elected in 1969, Hunter married while in office and has had three children with his wife Polly. "Our oldest, Jonathon, who is three, has an idea that I somehow work for television," Hunter said. "Whenever someone asks him where daddy works, he says 'at the office' and points to the television set."

"We may not have a gas bill. I'm at wit's end as to where we go from here," said Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., whose effort to win support for a lastditch compromise was rejected 16-2 on Thursday by Senate energy conferees.

After the vote, frustrated members of the House-Senate conference committee recessed for the year. They had stayed in Washington after congressional adjournment because of a personal appeal by President Carter to try to reach agreement before Christmas.

Although the committee will meet again in late January, leaders were not hopeful that a breakthrough on the gas-pricing issue would come then, either.

The stalemate is jeopardizing prospects for final congressional action on the plan Carter sent Congress last April to conserve energy through federal regulation and a series of taxes on energy use.

The conference committee, which began the job of reconciling wide House and Senate differences over the energy bill three months ago, has been stalled since it took up the natural gas portion on Dec. 2.

Some key members of the panel have suggested that the gas-pricing legislation be dumped — or at least put aside — and Carter sent the fragments of his plan already tentatively agreed to by conferees.

That would be a blow to hopes by Carter and House leaders of getting a comprehensive national energy bill next year. But so far, no one in either the administration or Congress has been able to suggest a way to break the gas-pricing deadlock.

Conferees already have approved parts of the plan dealing with energy conservation, industrial conversions from oil and gas to coal, and electric rate-setting.

Although Carter made retention of price controls on natural gas a key part of his plan, Congress has been battling the issue of controls versus deregulation for more than 20 years without reaching agreement.

Both House and Senate are near evenly divided on the issue, with a slight edge in the House in favor of keeping controls and an equally thin margin in the Senate for lifting them.

The House passed Carter's plan to continue controls at somewhat higher levels. But the Senate voted to lift the price ceilings after two years.

Although House conferees have proposed several middleground compromises between these two extremes, Senate negotiators have been unable to agree among themselves on any compromise proposal.

Conferees are also in disagreement over Carter's proposal for a tax on crude oil that would raise the price of gasoline and other petroleum products by an estimated 7 cents a gallon.

Mysterious Blasts Could Be Caused By Garbage Dumps

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Those mysterious booms high in the sky off the Atlantic Coast could be caused by exploding gas bubbling up from underwater garbage dumps, says one scientist.

That is one theory. Others speculate that they are sonic booms or come from outer space.

New explosions were heard Wednesday night by several residents along the New Jersey coastline.

"My whole house shook," said Ted Weeks, a fisherman at Barnegat Light. "Almost immediately the second report followed, but not near as loud. It was very distinct. The whole of Long Beach Island, I'm sure, heard it. You had to be dead not to have heard it."

Two similar but stronger blasts startled residents from Connecticut to South Carolina on Dec. 2.

Scientists at Columbia University's Lamont-Doherty Geophysical Observatory in Palisades, N.Y., said its instruments recorded those booms and five more on Dec. 15.

The equipment did not register Wednesday's reported blasts.

The explosions have been accompanied by reports of lights in the sky, sometimes a luminous glow.

Dr. Edward Chiburif, assistant director of the Weston Observatory of Boston College, said he suspects the sounds are sonic booms.

Dr. William Donn, head of atmospheric sciences at the Lamont-Doherty Observatory, said he was sure they are not sonic booms.

Ocean County, N.J., civil defense authorities said they had confidential information the blasts occurred in outer space. Federal officials discounted the outer space theory.

The garbage gas theory comes from Dr. Stanley Klemetson, environmental engineering researcher and associate professor of civil engineering at Colorado State University.

He said it is likely that a build-up of sludge deposits on the ocean bottom from dumping of treated wastes and garbage has produced anaerobic gases such as hydrogen and methane.

"As these gases accumulate beneath the sludge, sufficient quantity can collect to break through the layer and rise to the surface of the ocean," he said.

If warmer than the surrounding air, the gas will rise into the atmosphere, he said.

"Natural static electricity caused by wind friction is sufficient to set off the explosions," Klemetson said.

Klemetson noted that the blasts have been occurring over the general area where refuse from large coastal cities such as New York is dumped.

HELLO SUNSHINE! — Bryan McCrossan, 5, contemplates a basic solar furnace composed of dozens of mirrored squares during a visit to Ontario Science Center in Toronto.

Warehouses Popular For Tree Storage

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — When you take that brightly decorated Christmas tree down after the holidays, you might want to make it easy on yourself and store it in a warehouse until next year.

One of William D. Sutterfield's customers does just that. She rents space in Sutterfield's personal storage warehouse to house her fully trimmed, nine-foot artificial tree.

It's just one of the many uses people are finding for the you-store-it, mini-warehouse business that began in Texas 10 years ago, and reached the Columbus area in 1975.

The growth of the business has been rapid, fueled at least in part by the imagination of its customers.

"One couple's son had a car he was allowed to use as long as he kept up his high school grades," said Sutterfield, who operates three Secure-It warehouses in Columbus. "When (the grades) went down the parents would hide his car there until he brought his grades back up."

Another of Sutterfield's customers stores a collection of about 20 mounted animal heads in a rented miniature warehouse.

One man probably will be moving out of his unit soon, Sutterfield said. The man is assembling an airplane in the rented warehouse space and when all the components are in place, the craft will no longer fit. And another man, an outdoorsman, stores a recreational vehicle in his rented warehouse, Sutterfield said.

"I'm at the point where it's all routine with me and nothing seems unusual anymore," Sutterfield said.

The Columbus Police Department came up with one of the more imaginative uses earlier this year for the personal warehouses. Police investigators rented a unit from the Vince K. Oliver Co. and used it to store stolen goods they had purchased through a phony "fencing" operation, said Mary Anne Decker of the Oliver company.

Other people put the storage bins to more common use, such as for storing tools and furniture, said Robert Taggart of Taggart-Marryott Co. Realtors.

Mrs. Decker attributes the advent of the small-storage units to economics. The Oliver company, for example, found the warehouse business slack in 1975, so it partitioned a 25,000-square-foot warehouse into 250 miniature storage units.

Taggart followed suit the following year, converting a 9,600-foot warehouse into 88 individual units. He now is a partner in three Secure-It operations totaling 188,000 square feet and two more projects are under construction.

The units vary in size from 4-by-6 feet and 5-by-5 feet, to larger units of around 10-by-30 feet. Some have outside doors, and others have door accessible only from inside the building.

Monthly rents range upward from about $7 for smaller sizes. Formal rents are not necessary, Sutterfield said. People either pay their rent or they find a new lock on the door, he said.

Transit Strike Talks To Resume

CINCINNATI (AP) — Both transit and union officials expressed a hope that talks will resume today in the 20-day-old strike by drivers and mechanics.

Transit officials also said Monday and union officials expressed a hope that talks will resume today in the 20-day-old strike by drivers and mechanics.

Ed Harvey, general manager of Queen City Metro, said he planned to contact officials of the Amalgamated Transit Union for further discussions.

Gene Metz, union president, said he hoped talks will resume this week.

More than 800 Queen City drivers and mechanics walked off the job Dec. 8 in a wage dispute. Union officials said the strike was not authorized because the members are public employees. The company claims an estimated 65,000 persons ride the public transit system daily.

The union membership rejected four contract proposals, the last three because the municipally-owned transit system wants the new contract to expire after a pre-Christmas date.

Present top hourly pay is $6.56. In the last offer, Queen City offered $7.80 by Jan. 1, 1980, with free medical insurance.

Harvey said Queen City planned to offer testimony to Hamilton County Common Pleas Court Judge William R. Mathews on individuals who failed to comply with the judge's earlier back-to-work order.

Rain Expected Through Wednesday

By The Associated Press

A wet weather system covers the Pacific Coast with rain, snow, fog and clouds, while a mass of arctic air is nipping at the East today.

Sometimes heavy rain pelted much of California Monday with more expected today, including snow at higher elevations. The precipitation is expected to continue through Wednesday. The same weather system kept a light rain falling across Arizona Monday and forecasters said it could continue for several days.

Patchy fog was expected in some areas of Washington State today, with mostly fair skies across much of the state. Temperatures are below the freezing point across the state and across much of Oregon. Winds sometimes gusted to 30 mph in parts of Oregon Monday.

Temperatures were in the 30s, 40s and 50s across cloudy New Mexico. The temperatures were about the same, but the skies were clear across Utah.

Clear to partly cloudy skies are expected across Colorado, with mild temperatures.

Montana has partly cloudy skies with scattered light snow in the mountains. Parts of Wyoming were dusted with light snow Monday. Light snow was expected in Idaho today where fog yesterday created widespread highway problems.

The cold weather in the East is caused by a mass of arctic air pouring in from the upper Great Lakes and Wisconsin.

Massachusetts expected high temperatures to be in the 20s today under clear skies. Northern New England also has clear skies, with a chance of some flurries later today.

Heavy snow and high winds along Lake Erie Monday stranded motorists and closed a section of Interstate 90 in Pennsylvania.

Travelers advisories for heavy snow squalls remained in effect today across much of upstate New York. Buffalo expected up to six inches today in high winds. New York City has clear skies with temperatures in the 20s.

Occasional light snow continues to fall on the Maryland Mountains. Skies

are cloudy across much of Maryland and Delaware.

Virginia is under partly cloudy skies with temperatures getting down near five degrees at higher elevations.

A large high pressure system is dominating the weather picture in the Southeast, bringing frosty temperatures, but clear skies to wide areas.

Some snow flurries were expected today in the North Carolina mountains. Clear skies and cool weather are expected today over much of Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia.

Florida is braced for cooler temperatures, at the freezing point on the northern part of the state. Temperatures in the Miami area were expected to dip below 50.

Generally fair and cool weather prevails over Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana.

Clear weather prevails over Kansas and Missouri, with seasonably cool temperatures and some high wind.

Illinois temperatures today range from zero in the northern part of the state to the teens in southern areas. Minnesota and Wisconsin had temperatures below zero, with the mercury expected to drop to lower than 15-below-zero in some parts of Wisconsin and to 10-below in Southern Minnesota. Skies were clear across Indiana.

Snow fell across upper Michigan over the Christmas weekend, with more expected in some parts today. A 45-year record snowfall for a 24 hour period was recorded at midnight, Monday — 9.9 inches at Sault Ste. Marie.

Early morning temperatures around the nation ranged from 23 degrees below zero at Warroad, Minn., to 65 degrees at San Diego.

Creative Play Leads To Good Behavior

The Circleville Herald, Tuesday December 27, 1977

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Teaching children creative play may pay off in better behavior, according to a Columbus pediatrician.

"Learn ways of building self-esteem in your child and yourself," Dr. Sandra M. Stewart recommends.

For example, in a hiding game, hide a letter instead of a button, and when he finds it tell the child, "You found a letter H," Dr. Stewart said. "I don't want the parent to say to the child, 'what is this?' He says 'A,' and the parent says, 'No! That's an H,'" she said, because that is a failure for the child.

An extra benefit from this type of play may be the "awakening of the imaginative, creative, emotional, playful child in you."

Teaching creative play helps develop the child's left-brain, and this is the key to better behavior, said Dr. Stewart.

"Until (a child's) left brain develops, he's not going to do (something) just because you tell him to," she said.

Dr. Stewart explained that the left side of a person's brain handles mostly logical and analytical problems, such as following directions.

The right side of the brain is impulsive, Dr. Stewart said. The right side is more oriented to relying on experience for its information, and is more sensitive to gestures — body language — than words.

March Against Birth Defects Scheduled

Leora Sayre has been chosen chairman of the Circleville Mothers March of birth defects.

Held every January for the past 26 years, the neighbor-to-neighbor campaign is sponsored by the March of Dimes. In 1977 we raised the largest amount of money in the history of the Circleville Mothers March. In 1978 we MUST meet it or top the amount from last year. The March of Dimes uses the funds for programs aimed at prevention of birth defects — our nation's number one child health problem.

Aiming for the day when all children can be born free from the threat of birth defects, the March of Dimes funds numerous research programs. They also support special maternal-infant health care, genetic services, public and professional health education, and community services. The Central Ohio Chapter March of Dimes is currently making funds available to purchase an Eye-tone machine, for testing glucose, to be used by Dr. Emily Lutz of the Berger Hospital in Circleville.

Volunteers are needed for the Mothers March, which will be held January 22-29. Anyone interested in helping should contact Leora Sayre at 474-3952.

Two Local Music Students Are Featured

Steven Edman and Randall Wolfe, both students at Circleville High School and members of the CHS choir, have been selected to be represented in the 1978 edition of "Who's Who in Music", a publication honoring the "most outstanding high school music students" in the United States.

Deborah Fannin, Choral Director at CHS and head of the school's nominating committee, made the announcement.

The two students were nominated for the honor "based on their music ability, academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extra-curricular activities, and future potential."

Edman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Edman, 582 Hickory Place, and Wolfe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. Wolfe, 1257 Edgewood Drive.

"You're practicing a nice left-brain skill when you're reading," she said. "Watching television, unfortunately, is a very right-brain activity."

Dr. Stewart works primarily with children at Columbus Children's Hospital who have learning or behavior problems.

In a very small percentage of these cases "there may be a genetic problem in which more of their brain is specialized in right-brain thinking than in left-brain thinking," she said.

Most of the children "would have been perfectly okay if they had not been put in school until age eight" when their left brain was ready to handle school situations, Dr. Stewart said.

She is most interested in the children whose brains are "destined to be normal, but they live very stressful lives ..."

These stresses involve such things as diet, sleep and television habits, the doctor said.

"I'm afraid there's a lot of those kids," she said.

Dr. Stewart said that even if a child is normal, he's likely to be using his right brain at home, particularly after a day of school.

If the child misbehaves, "telling him the rule and punishing him is not likely to work," she said. Instead, she recommends trying to modify the child's behavior by distracting him with something else when he gets into something he shouldn't.

With an older child, Dr. Stewart said parents can make a contract, promising to do something for him in exchange for improved behavior.

"A lot of parents seem to get too upset when children don't obey," said

Dr. Sandra M. Stewart. "They want the child to obey just because they said so, but that's really unrealistic."

Farmer Gets Less, Middleman Gets More Of Food Dollar

WASHINGTON (AP) — The middlemen in the grocery business are taking more of the consumer's food dollar, new government figures show, while the farmer's share is going down.

The Agriculture Department says farmers in November received 38.5 cents of each $1 spent for food in retail stores, while middlemen — those who transport, process and sell food after it leaves the farm — got 61.5 cents.

In October, farmers got 39 cents and middlemen 61 cents.

The figures are based on a 65-item list of food items which originate on U.S. farms. Seafood, imported products and restaurant meals are not included in the analysis.

The new figures tend to support longstanding complaints by farmers, who say consumers don't understand that middlemen account for most of the average family's grocery bill.

When the middleman price spread is measured another way, the gap between farmers and consumers is even larger, the department says.

For example, for total food purchases in 1977, farmers are getting 31.1 cents of each $1 consumers spend, and middlemen are getting 68.9 cents.

Thus, if a hypothetical basket of food could be put together and sold for $18 to reflect the total food spending of consumers this year, the department says, the farmers' share would be $5.60 and middlemen would get $12.40.

CETA Jobs Available

The Pickaway County Commissioners are announcing several work positions made available through the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act program. CETA is a federally funded jobs program.

There are two categories under the County Commissioners program: CETA II in which an applicant must be unemployed for 30 days; and CETA VI in which an individual must be unemployed for 15 weeks and not exceed a specific income level.

Job openings under CETA II presently include a position as Juvenile Court Bailiff, an administrative assistant for the City of Circleville, and a clerical position.

Newly created jobs under CETA VI include a labor opening with the City of Circleville and a position as female security guard for the Ross County Juvenile Detention Center.

All interested applicants should first register with the Ohio Bureau of Employment Services and then apply for the various positions at the County Commissioners Office.

Commissioners Receive Yearly Reports

The Pickaway County Commissioners received end of the year reports from Dale Edwards, bee inspector, and Ralph Wallace, dog warden. Edwards requested a salary increase to $4.00 per hour. He reported inspecting 1,483 colonies of bees in the county and worked a total of 666 hours, during 1977.

Wallace reported that 2,676 dogs had been exterminated by the county during 1977.

The commissioners approved a request for the annexation of 6,054 acres of land to the city of Circleville. The annexation, petitioned by Fairfield Homes, Inc., Lancaster, includes Meadowview addition, northwest of the southeast line of Meadow Drive. The annexation needs the approval of city council to become official.

The commissioners will meet Tuesday, January 3, since all county offices will be closed Jan. 2.

Congress Talks 3 Volumes Full During Final Day In Session

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Words, words, words. Is it possible that even such practiced talkers as the members of the U.S. House and Senate said so much the last day they were in session in 1977?

The Congressional Record for that single day runs three volumes, more than 600 pages, at a cost of $322 a page, to record the words allegedly spoken on the floor of the two chambers.

Not even the best Senate filibuster could read aloud that much material in less than 48 hours. Yet, the House was in session that day for six and one-half hours, the Senate for seven.

A lot of those words went unsaid. They were statements "submitted for the record" by members of Congress and inserted as though they were part of the debate.

Some people want to change that practice. Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., has campaigned, without much success, to win approval of a measure to require that the record clearly show which material was spoken on the floor and which was merely inserted.

There is a place in the record for statements. It's called "extensions of remarks" and appears at the end of each day's issue.

Every member of Congress is allowed to fill two pages a day in the extensions section, something which few do. If a member wants to insert material that runs more than two pages he must obtain permission on the floor, permission which is routinely granted.

But he also must state publicly, for the record, that he intends to insert unprinted pages of material at a cost of $322 a page.

What sort of material is placed in extensions of remarks?

The last day of the session produced the expected statements on issues ranging from Social Security and crime to energy, jobs and whether the Crown of St. Stephen should be returned to Hungary.

There also was a brief tribute to the Alcoa, Tenn., high school football team which won the state Class A championship; and Rep. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., informed his colleagues that jars of South Dakota honey, contributed by Alvin C. Zietlow of Rapid City, would be found on the tables of House restaurants.

There were nice words about the University of Michigan football team, as well as about Nick Santoro of Reading, Pa., a member of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission for 37 years, and Emerson Street, who is retiring as business representative for the Santa Clara County, Calif., Central Labor Council.

Among the words spoken on the Senate floor that final day were some by Sen. S. I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., who offered two resolutions. One of them would designate Memphis, Tenn., as "The Home of the Blues," and the other would recognize blues singer Memphis Slim as an ambassador-at-large of goodwill.

Both resolutions were adopted with the hearty support of the two senators from Tennessee, neither of whom

Russian Writer Asks Countrymen For Recollections

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Russian immigrants in the United States, Europe, Australia and Japan have answered exiled Russian author Alexander Solzhenitsyn's plea for recollections of their native Russia, Solzhenitsyn's interpreter says.

Solzhenitsyn, a Nobel Prize-winning writer now living in Cavendish, recently asked his countrymen to write their recollections for use in his Russian Memorial Library.

Solzhenitsyn's family spokesman, Irene Alberti, said Monday that no material has arrived from the Soviet Union although Solzhenitsyn's request went there by radio.

"They wouldn't be able to send it by mail. We hope to eventually get some from there," she said in a telephone interview from Cavendish.

The library now is in Cavendish, but Mrs. Alberti said Solzhenitsyn hopes to some day move it to the Soviet Union.

Former Secretary Elected To Post

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Former Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld has been elected to the board of directors of the Rand Corp. think tank.

Rumsfeld, 45, is president and chief executive officer of G.D. Searle and Co. of Skokie, Ill., a worldwide health care supplier. He joined the firm last June after teaching at Northwestern University's Graduate School of Management.

Rumsfeld served as defense secretary from November 1975 through the end of the Ford administration last January. In August 1974 he chaired the transition team as Gerald Ford became president, and a month later was named a special assistant to the president.

He also has served as U.S. ambassador to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and director of the Cost of Living Council.

Four of the top five teams in The Associated Press Top Twenty college basketball poll juggled positions this week after No. 2 Marquette lost to Louisville.

The Warriors, last year's national champions, were beaten 61-60 Thursday and fell to fifth while the next three teams each moved up a spot.

No. 1 Kentucky remained at the top of the heap, walloping Iowa, 104-65. The Wildcats, 8-0, received all 45 first-place votes cast by the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters for a total of 900 points.

North Carolina, 7-1, beat Tulane 108-103 to edge from third to second with 820 points.

Arkansas, 8-0, one of last year's surprise teams, beat Hardin-Simmons 86-55 and Kansas 78-72 to rise from fourth to third with 614 points.

Notre Dame, 7-1, routed St. Joseph's of Indiana 108-72 and totaled 560 points to move up from No. 5. Marquette, now 5-1, collected 519 points.

Indiana State, 7-0, did not play during the holiday week and remained sixth.

Louisville, 6-1, moved from eighth to seventh through its victory over Marquette and a 69-63 triumph over Dayton.

UCLA, 8-1, defeated San Jose State 109-69 and New Mexico State 86-67 but dropped one notch from seventh while unbeaten Nevada-Las Vegas held its ninth-place spot by edging Northwestern 100-95 and Iowa 85-84 to raise its record to 11-0.

Also holding its previous position was No. 10 Syracuse, 8-1, which was idle last week.

Cincinnati, 6-1, advanced from 12th to No. 11; Holy Cross, 6-0, moved from No. 13 to No. 12 and Providence, 6-0, rose from 14th to 13th.

Maryland, 7-1, leaped from 20th to No. 14.

Indiana, 6-1 and unranked a week ago, reached No. 15 this week thanks in part to its 66-57 victory over Alabama.

Rounding out the Top 20 were Virginia, 5-0; Kansas, 7-2; previously unranked Florida State, 8-0; San Francisco, 6-3 and Detroit, 6-1.

San Francisco lost twice and plummeted from 11th while Detroit fell from No. 15.

Bullets Shoot Down Hawks In NBA Weekend Feature

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Atlanta Hawks must be sick of seeing the Washington Bullets ... and equally sick of losing to them.

The Hawks played the Bullets two consecutive nights in a home-and-home series and both times lost to them by identical margins — the last one a 113-106 decision Monday night.

"It's hard to win after you have beaten the same team the previous night," said Washington Coach Dick Motta. "Traditionally, teams split when they play on consecutive nights."

"But the fact that we won two nights in a row by seven points does not mean that we are seven points better than they are. It just worked out that way."

Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown felt a bit chagrined, especially with the home-court loss.

"Well," he said, "that's two tough losses for us. It's the first time in a while we've been under .500. We are 9-5 at home now. But I guess we have to be objective. It's been two sevenpoint losses to a heck of a good team."

The Bullets won the first game 100-93 Sunday night.

In Monday night's other NBA games, the Detroit Pistons defeated the Boston Celtics 122-100; the Houston Rockets tripped the Kansas City Kings 113-99 and the Denver Nuggets whipped the Phoenix Suns 127-108.

Larry Wright scored 10 of his 17 points in the final period to spur Washington over Atlanta. Atlanta scored 30 points in the last period — including 14 by Steve Hawes — but the Bullets held on to their nearly gamelong lead with the help of Wright's burst at the end.

Pistons 122, Celtics 100
Eric Money's 23 points led Detroit over Boston. Money's nine points in the third helped the Pistons to a 100-68 margin at the end of the quarter. The Celts, who have now lost six straight and 11 straight games on the road, were led by former Piston Dave Bing with 19 points.

Rockets 113, Kings 99
Calvin Murphy and Moses Malone pumped in 22 points each to spark Houston over Kansas City. Murphy scored 20 of his points in the first half as the Rockets took an early lead and were never headed.

Nuggets 127, Suns 108
David Thompson and Dan Issel each tallied 24 points, leading six Denver players in double figures as the Nuggets defeated Phoenix. The Suns were led by Walter Davis' 23 points.

Cage Classic Gets Started

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The 42nd All-College Basketball Tournament, the country's oldest holiday cage classic, tips off Tuesday night with perhaps the best overall field it has had in several years.

First-round action Tuesday matches Arizona State, 5-4, against Oral Roberts, 4-4, at 7 p.m. (CST), to be followed by a game between host Oklahoma City, 7-2, and Boston College, 5-2.

Tournament favorite San Francisco, 6-3, goes up against highly regarded Miami, Ohio, 5-1, on Wednesday. The second game that night will match two teams with only one loss each — Texas A&M, 6-1, and Austin Peay, 4-1.

Arizona State has had an up-and-down season, but showed some muscle earlier in the year by defeating San Francisco. Guard Blake Taylor leads the Sun Devils, averaging 17.3 points per game, and fellow backcourt man Rick Taylor, no relation, has been hitting at a 14.8 clip.

Oral Roberts is the only team in the field not sporting a winning record. The young Titans are led by guard Lamont Reid with a 15-point scoring average.

Six-foot-eight center Bob Benfield is the big gun for Boston college, averaging 18 points and 11 rebounds a game. The smallish Oklahoma City Chiefs counter with a three-guard offense, led by Allen Leavell, averaging 22 points a game, and Ernie Hill, averaging 20.8.

Attendance at the tournament is expected to be much greater than in recent years, mainly because it will be a homecoming for San Francisco star Winford Boynes, a junior.

Boynes, who has been averaging better than 22 points for the Dons, was highly recruited standout from Oklahoma City Capitol Hill High School.

Semifinals Setup For NFL Super Bowl

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

And so the 1977 pro football season dwindles down to a precise few — the inexorable machine, the perennial bridesmaids, the easy riders and the rejects.

That's the order in which they square off next Sunday in the semifinal matchups for the National Football League's Super Bowl — Dallas vs. Minnesota, and Oakland vs. Denver.

An intriguing New Year's Day bill of fare, indeed, fitting subjects for Jimmy the Greek, psychologists and the millions of rocking chair buffs.

The Dallas Cowboys are the ice crushers in this bizarre scenario. Cold, seemingly bereft of emotion, they take large hunks of opponents and grind them up into small cubes — as in Monday's 37-7 rout of Walter Payton and the Chicago Bears.

They didn't emerge from a womb, as do mere mortals. They are products of IBM. From austere, unsmiling Coach Tom Landry, striding the sidelines in his pork-pie hat, dapper suit and tie, to Roger Staubach, the methodical field general. Theirs is an exercise in expert execution and precision. They disdain the old whoop 'em up college try. They are computerized. Touch a button and Staubach hits Drew Pearson in a seam for 15 yards. A little Houdini sleight of hand and Tony Dorsett and Robert Newhouse follow an open road for 20 more. There is a dynamite fuse at every position.

A thumbnail analysis:
Main liability: Possible absence of fire. Chief asset: Talent and organization.

The one team able to match Dallas in experience and resourcefulness is the Minnesota Vikings, who proved it with a 14-7 upset victory over the Los Angeles Rams on a drenched field.

The Vikings have made the playoffs in nine of the last 10 years and are one step away from their fifth appearance in the Super Bowl, which they have never won. They inevitably have suffered from "big gameitis."

Now with back-up quarterback Bob Lee filling in for the injured Fran Tarkenton, Chuck Foreman carrying the ball with his usual frenzy and the fabled "Purple People-Eaters" hungrier than ever, the Vikings are out to quell charges that they are chokers.

Main liability: Big game complex. Chief asset: Chuck Foreman.

Whichever of the two survives — Cowboys or Vikings, there is little to look forward to in the Jan. 15 Super Bowl at New Orleans.

The defending champion Oakland Raiders, a wild flying wild-card qualifier, exemplify the trademark code of the American Football Conference — forget caution, storm the bastions, Heaven help the hindmost.

In another era, the Raiders would have been riverboat gamblers and barroom brawlers. They would have worn zoot suits with gold chains dangling to their kneecaps. The bearded maverick, Ken Stabler, and sure-handed Fred Biletnikoff can pick your pockets and you don't feel a thing.

It's a tough talented team that plays and lives with wild abandon.

Main liability: Looseness. Chief asset: Versatility.

The Raiders face a different kind of challenge in the Denver Broncos, a team of retrainees who found a magic potion in the rare chemistry of fierce team spirit and exuberant fan support.

Quarterback Craig Morton was cast off by the Cowboys and the New York Giants; place-kicker Jim Turner wasn't even wanted by the lowly New York Jets, Coach Red Miller, spurned by several teams, spent 17 years as an assistant before getting the Bronco job. The now famed Orange-Crush Defense used to be Orange Sherbet.

Main liability: Lack of experience and depth. Chief asset: Motivation.

Prediction: Dallas to extinguish the Vikings' new fire and Oakland banditry to fleece Denver's Orange. Then Dallas wins its second Super Bowl.

Minnesota Sinks LA Rams In Ocean Of Mud, 14-7

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Most everybody talked about the weather in Los Angeles, but the Minnesota Vikings did something about it.

Faced with surprising swamp-like conditions in the ever-dry Southern California city, the Vikings adjusted to the new scenery and came away with a 14-7 victory over the Los Angeles Rams Monday that was even more shocking than the weather.

"We knew it was tough to hold onto the ball, so we just tried to hold on, get what we could and go down and score. It was no day for heroics," said Chuck Foreman after the victory sent the Vikings into next Sunday's National Conference playoff game against the Dallas Cowboys.

The Cowboys did not surprise anyone in the other NFC playoff game Monday, bumping Chicago's wild-card Bears out of the playoff picture with a clinical, 37-7 decision.

The Minnesota-Dallas game will be one half of a championship doubleheader next weekend. The Denver Broncos will play the Oakland Raiders for the American Conference championship and the right to meet the winner of the Vikings-Cowboys game in the Super Bowl on Jan. 14 in New Orleans.

The Broncos earned a berth in the AFC title game with a 34-21 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday, and Oakland edged the Baltimore Colts 37-31 in a double-overtime thriller.

Minnesota, a 9½-point underdog to Los Angeles, forged a 14-0 lead behind the passing of Bob Lee and the running of Foreman, then withstood some late heroics by the Rams, who scored their touchdown and had another shot at a score, all in the last minute.

The Rams, who had beaten the Vikings 35-3 earlier in the year on a sunnier field in the Los Angeles Coliseum, couldn't excuse themselves this time because, as Los Angeles Coach Chuck Knox said, "We had a couple of opportunities in the first half and we couldn't get in and that hurt us. The field conditions were terrible for both teams. It was a quagmire, but a quagmire for both teams."

The conversation in the Minnesota locker room, quite naturally, also turned to the deplorable weather and field conditions.

"Playing on a field like this is worse than snow," said Minnesota quarterback Bob Lee, who directed his team through the rain and mud to touchdown bursts by Foreman and Sammy Johnson. "You're slipping, your runners are slipping and your receivers are slipping. I think the thing that I was most impressed by was the way our ballcarriers and receivers held onto the ball. It's kind of amazing that we didn't have one turnover."

Action In Tournaments

It was playground basketball at its best — but it was the worst kind of basketball as far as Hank Raymonds was concerned.

"You can't afford to play that kind of a game against anybody," said the Marquette coach.

Fortunately for the nation's fifth-ranked team, the Warriors could play a wild, one-on-one style instead of the classic team concept and still get away with a 17-point victory in the Milwaukee Classic Monday night.

"I don't like that kind of basketball," said Raymonds after the 90-73 victory over Eastern Kentucky. "It's my job to put a stop to it."

Marquette will have to be more disciplined tonight in the title game against Texas, a 74-73 winner over Army in the other opening-round game.

"I saw the first half of their game," said Raymonds. "Texas plays match-up defense. They move the ball very well. This is a good basketball team. We're going to have to control the tempo. And we've got to get the ball inside. We simply have to get the ball inside."

In other tournament action Monday night, the University of Detroit and Eastern Michigan advanced to the finals of the Motor City Classic in Detroit. The host Titans, ranked 20th in the country, whipped Harvard 77-69 and Eastern Michigan defeated Long Island University 81-70.

Marquette was led by Butch Lee's 25 points and Jerome Whitehead's 21. The Warriors charged ahead by outscoring Eastern Kentucky 17-2 in a four-minute stretch midway through the first half to lead 35-16 with 6:27 remaining before intermission. Six of the last eight points during the Warrior spurt came on long jump shots by guard Gary Rosenberger.

But Eastern Kentucky then scored nine straight points, including five by Ken Elliott, to make it 35-25 with 3:43 left in the half. Marquette responded with a 10-3 spree, including five points by Lee, that made it 45-28 at the half, and the Warriors maintained the lead throughout the second half.

Texas survived a late Army comeback and beat the Cadets with John Moore and Tyrone Branyan hitting key free throws in the closing seconds. The Longhorns won their eighth straight game after an opening-season loss.

Terry Duerod had 20 points to help Detroit come from behind to beat Harvard. Harvard was ahead the entire first half, leading 40-26 at the buzzer. But Duerod had eight points in four minutes at the beginning of the second half to put the Titans in a tie at 46 with 15 minutes to go. The score changed hands until the final eight minutes when Detroit went ahead to stay.

In the earlier game, Eastern Michigan's Bill Weaver had 16 points to lead the Hurons to victory.

Elsewhere, Joe Calvin scored 21 points as Illinois State defeated Kent State 79-71.

Fittipaldi Signs 2-Year Contract

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Former Formula I racing champion Emerson Fittipaldi signed a two-year contract with Copersucar last week, the driver says.

The contract will give the Fittipaldi team about $2 million in the first year.

Copersucar, the giant coffee, sugar and alcohol producing company with headquarters in this Brazilian industrial city, announced in November it would contract Fittipaldi for another year.

Fittipaldi, who recently returned from trial runs in France, next plans to practice in Buenos Aires.

Alfio Righetti Gets 10-Round Decision

RIMINI, Italy (AP) — Italian heavyweight Alfio Righetti scored a 10-round decision over Great Britain's Tony Moore before a hometown crowd Monday.

Righetti staggered Moore in the seventh and eighth rounds and dominated the fight.

Griffin Says Play Defense

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Archie Griffin, the only college football player ever to win the Heisman Trophy twice, had some advice for younger brother Ray.

"Archie said, 'You'll be a real high draft choice if you stay on defense,'" the Ohio State senior remembered.

This dilemma surfaced after the opening game with Miami this fall. Jeff Logan and Ricky Johnson, two top tailbacks, were hurt.

Suddenly, the Buckeyes' offensive runners were scarce. The SOS went out for Ray Griffin, one of the nation's premier safeties, to return to the attacking unit.

After all, it should have been an easy transition. Ray had won All-Ohio prep honors as a tailback and understudied his more famous brother as an Ohio State freshman.

It wasn't.

Griffin, one of seven brothers who play the sport, worked two games at tailback. He carried 21 times for just 74 yards.

"It was a lack of practice on offense for me," he said of the ill-fated switch. "It wasn't for a lack of confidence. It just takes time."

So it was back to safety in the fourth game. He stayed there the rest of the way, but the move, he concedes, hurt his chances to follow in Archie's footsteps as a consensus All-America.

"I agree," said the 5-foot-9, 182-pound Ray, swifter and lighter than Archie.

"But I wanted to make the change as far as the team was concerned. It was a good move for the team. It was not a good move for me personally. At Ohio State, I want to think more of the team."

Ivan Lendl Wins Tennis Tourney

MIAMI (AP) — Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia has claimed the championship in the 18-under boys' division of the Orange Bowl Junior Tennis Tournament with an upset victory over top-seeded Yannick Noah of France.

Lendl, the No. 3 seeded player, came back Monday after dropping the first set 3-6 and won a 7-6 tiebreaker, going on to take the final set 6-3.

In the girls' division, secondseeded Anne Smith of Dallas outlasted No. 1 seed Hana Strachonova 7-6, 7-5.

Postal Service Changes Won't Help Financial Woes

WASGUBGTIB (AP) — A bill to remove some of the Postal Service's independence would not, if passed, make the agency's financial problems disappear, Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar says.

In fact, the agency is in its best financial condition since it was reorganized in 1971, Bailar said in an interview. Its $700 million 1977 deficit compares to a $1 billion loss in each of the two previous years.

A bill introduced by Reps. James M. Hanley D-N.Y. and Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., would allow Congress to veto postal rate increases, restore presidential power to appoint the postmaster general and abolish the Postal Service board of governors.

Currently, the president appoints the governors, who appoint the postmaster.

"Making changes in the structure of the Postal Service is not going to make the problems disappear," Bailar said. "You can't wish away all of the rising costs and other economic trends. You can't wish that it didn't cost $16 billion a year to run the Postal Service."

Bailar said he opposes a $2 billion annual mail subsidy contained in the legislation, because it would place an unfair burden on individual taxpayers. The current annual subsidy is $920 million.

Carter Family Good In Business Ventures

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — It used to be when folks thought of the Carter family, they thought of peanuts. Not any more.

In the 11 months Jimmy Carter has been president, members of his family have parlayed his position into almost a million-dollar windfall.

The president's kinfolk have come a long way since that hot summer in Plains, Ga., a year and a half ago when Amy was selling lemonade for a dime and tuna fish sandwiches for a dollar.

Now there are books — one about Carter's mother's Peace Corps days in India, two about faith healing and one in preparation about brother Billy.

And there are personal appearances by Billy Carter — at the World Champion Belly-flop and Cannonball Diving contest in Canada and the World Champion Pole-climbing contest in Kentucky, to name only two.

Billy's agent says he makes four such appearances a month at $5,000 each. That would be $240,000 a year.

The president's younger brother has put his picture and signature on a new beer called "Billy." It was first marketed last fall by the Falls City Brewing Co. of Louisville, Ky., which owns the rights.

Cousin Hugh Carter, who owns a worm farm in Plains, said his business has increased 25 percent since Jimmy Carter went to the White House. He said he sells 15 million worms a year — about $104,250 gross.

The president's sister, Gloria Carter Spann, compiled the letters her mother wrote while she was in the Peace Corps. The book, "Away From Home: Letters to My Family," has sold 35,000 hardback copies, according to Emily Boxer of Simon and Schuster, the publisher.

Lung Disease Linked To Smoke, Grain Dust

PHILADELPHIA — People whose jobs expose them to high concentrations of grain dust who also smoke cigarettes may be at high risk of developing chronic obstructive lung disease.

Although it is difficult to separate the effects of smoking from those of inhaling large quantities of grain dust in people who do both, such individuals seem to fare worse than those who do one or the other, James A. Dosman, M.D., F.R.C.P., of the University of Saskatchewan, says in an editorial in the December 1977 issue of Annals of Internal Medicine.

The Annals is the scientific journal of the American College of Physicians, a national professional organization of over 40,000 specialists in internal medicine and related areas.

Chronic obstructive pulmonary disease seems to be the most commonly occurring lung condition in grain workers. Components of grain dust include insect parts, rat hair, mold spores, and pesticides as well as grain particles and antigens that can cause reactions. There are an estimated 500,000 grain workers in the United States and 30,000 in Canada, excluding farmers.

Dr. Dosman recommends that persons who are exposed to cereal dust in their jobs should refrain from smoking on the job, and raises the possibility that such jobs be given to nonsmokers. His conclusion is based on a study of 1,066 grain elevator operators. Dr. Dosman and his associates used an air flow test (called a spirogram) to measure the workers' lung function to detect the presence of chronic obstructive lung disease. Nonsmokers were found to have little evidence of disease, even when exposed to grain dust for a period of many years. However, smokers who were exposed to the dust had poorer lung function than either the non-smoking workers or smokers who were not exposed to the dust.

"The implication... is that smoking and exposure to grain dust, occurring together in the same person, result in a diminution in lung function that does not appear to occur with either taken separately," Dr. Dosman says.

The mechanisms by which this happens are not clear; cigarette smoking may intensify airway obstruction caused by the dust, or the dust may intensify obstruction caused by smoking. It is also possible that the two irritants work together to produce effects neither could produce alone.

In Dr. Dosman's view, this observation may mean that part of the responsibility for protecting worker health may belong to those workers who smoke.

Has the president ever discussed the family's moneymaking ventures with her?

"Jimmy has never said a word to me ...," she replied.

The president's other sister, Ruth Carter Stapleton, has been a faith-healing evangelist for 20 years. She, too, is doing well as an author. And she recently purchased a 30-acre ranch outside Dallas, Texas, which she plans to turn into a spiritual retreat.

President Carter's children are also attuned to the times.

Son Jeff, 25, and his wife, Annette, who are interested in photography, recently sold 10 pictures to the annual edition of Life magazine for $10,000. The first lady's press secretary said they plan to give the money to charity.

Judy Carter, who is married to the president's 30-year-old son, Jack, has become a contributing editor to Redbook magazine, following in the journalistic tradition of presidential daughters.

Carter's middle son, Chip, 27, worked part-time for the Democratic National Committee. He was paid $8,000 for the seven months' work before moving back to Plains with his wife last September.

His cousin, Hugh Carter Jr., has a $51,000-a-year job at the White House in charge of administrative matters and cutting costs.

Plane Lands On Highway

RED OAK, Iowa (AP) — Motorists along U.S. 34 in southwest Iowa were surprised Monday to see a light airplane swoop down and land on the highway about 10 miles east of here.

The Montgomery County sheriff's office said the pilot of the plane was Leo Radar, an airplane mechanic from Arcanum, Ohio. Radar and his wife and 18-month old daughter were flying from Dayton to Spokane, Wash.

They were en route from the Davis County airport in Indiana to Rapid City, S.D., when the craft ran out of gas, authorities said.

One motorist, Fred Loeb of Stanton, saw the plane land near Viking Lake State Park and stopped to help push the craft off the highway.

Some aviation gasoline was brought to the site, the plane was pushed back onto the highway and Radar flew to the Red Oak airport to refuel.

Although the airport was closed for the holiday, Radar got some gas from the Civil Air Patrol and proceeded on his way to South Dakota.

Yule Traffic Deaths Below Estimates

By The Associated Press
Traffic accidents over the three-day Christmas holiday claimed 364 lives — a toll below pre-holiday estimates and last year's three-day Christmas total.

The National Safety Council estimated before the count began at 6 p.m. local time Friday that between 380 and 480 people might die in highway accidents before the holiday ended at midnight local time Monday.

Last year, 416 people died in highway accidents during the Christmas holiday, also a three-day observance.

The council said the traffic toll during a non-holiday, three-day period at this time of year would be about 340.

Doctors Give Advice On Influenza

PHILADELPHIA — With the influenza season almost upon us, Philip C. Hoffman, M.D. and Richard E. Dixon, M.D. of the Public Health Service Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta recommend that patients with uncomplicated influenza be kept at home and out of hospitals.

However, curtailing hospital visits from people in the community is probably unnecessary even in periods of widespread influenza, unless visitors show actual signs of illness, the CDC physicians say in the December 1977 issue of Annals of Internal Medicine, the scientific publication of the American College of Physicians.

The College is a national professional organization of over 40,000 specialists in internal medicine and allied areas.

Hospitalized patients are much more likely to contract influenza from hospital employees than from visitors, and immunizing employees is a step well worth considering, Drs. Hoffman and Dixon advise.

A drug shown to offer some protection against influenza type 'A' can also be given to employees. It is most useful when given for temporary protection during the time between receiving a flu shot and developing antibodies to the virus, because otherwise susceptibility to influenza increases when the drug is discontinued. Amantadine has been shown to significantly reduce the risk of developing influenza and does not interfere with the body's antibody response to flu vaccine.

Drs. Hoffman and Sixon also say that isolation or grouping of patients who do develop influenza in the hospital should be considered to reduce spread to other patients.

Capt. Smallwood, Sgt. Pontious Attend School

Capt. Jerry Smallwood and Sgt. Larry Pontious of the Circleville Police Department attended a two-week firearms instructors school at the Ohio Peace Officers Training Academy in London this month.

The two officers received new training techniques that will enable them to train local police officers in firearms.

The training allows Smallwood and Pontious to hold a training school and to teach students through the Industrial Commission of Ohio, which gave the two teaching certificates for vocational education.

The session dealt in part with firearms and with instructional techniques.

Smallwood said the old training did not put stress on anybody. "It was just target practice," he said.

The academy firearms instructor, Bill Groce, developed a new technique which deals with being able to shoot fast and accurately.

For example, Smallwood said, "We had to shoot three targets, two shots in each target in four seconds. We had to shoot in total darkness with a flashlight."

"We had to shoot in total darkness with a beacon (red light)," Smallwood said that was the hardest part. "When that beacon moves around, the target moves," he said.

Both local officers qualified as 'expert' shooters.

Law enforcement officers from all over Ohio and a United States Coast Guard officer from Wisconsin attended the school.

Storms Did Not End 2-Year Western Drought

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Three solid storms have dumped rain and snow across thirsty California since Thanksgiving, but the two-year drought may not be over yet, a forecaster says.

A wet weather depression meandering in the eastern Pacific funneled another storm into the state Monday, sending added snow to the Sierra slopes and widespread rains to lower elevations. More of the same was expected today.

Despite the storms, National Weather Service forecaster Ray Williams says: "So far this year precipitation is normal, but we don't know what the rest of the year really is going to do."

Williams noted the water table is still far below what it should be and that water rationing is still the rule in many areas.

Three of the largest reservoirs in California are still at critically low levels, the state Drought Information Center in Sacramento points out.

Shasta Dam, which has a capacity of 4.5 million acre-feet, has only 914,000 acre-feet in storage. Folsom Dam, with a million-acre-foot capacity, has 182,000-acre-feet; Oroville Dam has a third of its 3.5 million-acre-foot capacity.

A fair weather high pressure system had hovered over northern California for two years, diverting storms from the state. But the system has broken up and there is little evidence on weather charts to indicate any new high pressure formation in the offing, Williams says.

California utilities do not have enough water on hand to talk about an end to the drought. But they do have hope.

The East Bay Municipal Utility District last weekend reported 60 inches of snow at 6,000 feet, while normal for this time of year at that elevation is 30 inches. Last year at this time, there was no snow at all.
